BETWEEN YOU AND US . . .

Frankly, you cannot expect anyone to revise or criticise YOUR literary work efficiently and confidently unless they are capable of selling their OWN literary work to well-known editors and publishers.

W. and L. TOWNSEND, who revise all the work submitted to the AUTHORS' AID SERVICE, have their own books published under the imprint of some of the best-known publishers in Europe and America, viz. Messrs. George Allen & Unwin, Ltd., Crosby Lockwood, Ltd., E. & F. Spon, Ltd., all of London; The Macmillan Co. of New York; The House of Bonnier, of Sweden, etc., etc.

Reviewers say of W. and L. TOWNSEND'S recent technical book: "Chapter 7 in this book is worth the whole price paid for this volume." "A remarkably handy and clever book." "A product of specialised experience. Clear and direct." "Sound and logical." "The language used is virile, concise and straight to the point."

Collaborated short stories and articles have appeared in so many British newspapers and magazines that it would need a page or two to list them. In the field of children's literature, W. and L. Townsend have written, over the last 30 years, stories catering for the tiny tots up to the 14-16-year-age group.

Whatever your literary need may be, authors at home and overseas can be assured by W. and L. TOWNSEND of the same care and flair for successful writing where their own manuscripts are concerned.

THEORY . . .

. . . there must be. But it must be practical theory and by that we mean down-to-earth stuff not head-in-the-air writings by folk (please forgive us) who have sold next to no work of their own and who then proceed to tell others how to sell.

The theory that accompanies every K.K. Course is contained in textbooks and has been written, every word of it, by writers who live because they can write. These books (details are given below) will be of constant help to you long after any meagre pamphleted theory has fallen to pieces or has been mislaid.

A GUIDE TO FICTION-WRITING (Kobold Knight) has been reprinted eight times, translated and transposed into Braille. PLOT DIGEST (Kobold Knight) is in its 12th Edition now. It is a comprehensive study of all the known methods of Plotting and includes hundreds of key plots. A recent purchaser tells us that he finds it too stimulating in bed o' nights but just what the Doctor ordered when Inspiration flags. PLOT DIGEST is priced at 30/- to non-students.

A GUIDE TO ARTICLE-WRITING (G. J. Matson) has been reprinted seven times and is the best theory procurable by the student interested in Journalism.

W.N.G., the K.K. Director of Studies, wrote WRITING FOR RADIO specially for the use of our Radio students.

Elsewhere in this Year Book you will find something about how we set about our fascinating job of training writers. The partners are KOBOLD KNIGHT and Lt.-Col. W. N. GRIFFITHS and the address is:

New Writers

Hundreds of editors require articles and short stories. Most of these articles and stories are written by outside contributors living in all parts of the country.

You need not be a genius to succeed in this fascinating and profitable field—but you must know how to write in the way that appeals to editors. If you have literary ability, the postal courses conducted by the Regent Institute offer you thoroughly practical training.

TRY THIS FREE TEST. Send a specimen article or short story for criticism, and enclose a stamped envelope for its return. The MS. will be carefully read and candidly criticised. When it is mentioned that many prospective students are rejected, the value of this privilege of getting a frank, expert opinion needs no emphasis.

Earning While Learning

Whether you submit a specimen MS. or not, write to the Institute for a free copy of an interesting booklet describing the openings in the literary market, and the special advantages of postal training which has enabled so many new writers to earn while learning, scores of students having won almost immediate success.

Post the coupon or send a simple request for the booklet, addressed to The Regent Institute (Dept. 35C), Regent House, Palace Gate, London, W.8.

Why is it that so many new writers seek the aid of the Regent Institute to enable them to exploit fully the varied opportunities offered by spare-time journalism? There are four principal reasons:

(1) Because of the remarkable results secured by the Institute's postal courses in Journalism and short story writing. Students have disposed of their work to over 1,450 newspapers and periodicals. Hundreds of pupils have sold articles and short stories during tuition.

(2) Because the instructional staff consists of successful authors and journalists whose combined experience enables them to meet the requirements of every class of student. Not only have the instructors had wide experience of free-lancing, but several have served on the staffs of well-known newspapers and periodicals.

(3) Because the personal note that characterises the instruction is a living thing—a vital, inspiring method that draws the best out of the student and shows him how to make the most of his individual talent.

(4) Because the Institute's courses embody original features which, though they have been imitated, have never been equalled.

For two decades the CRITICISM SERVICE conducted by THE AUTHORS' AID SERVICE has pursued its work of analysing, with keen sympathy for the writers' aims, all types of manuscripts which had not found favour before they came into our office. We have demonstrated how, with correct treatment, such manuscripts can be made to find favour. For their skill and keen interest, our Critics have earned—and received—the gratitude of countless authors and writers, including some of our best-known novelists and broadcasters.

Literary Criticism, as we see it, must do very much more than point out—even though it does so with unerring clarity and skill—all the faults a manuscript possesses. It is just as vitally important to know the merits in a manuscript as the faults.

Very definitely YOU want to know how to correct your literary faults or weaknesses, and how to present your work with that magic appeal which is the hallmark of good writing. You want to feel, too, that the Critic who is dealing with your work has a sympathetic interest and understanding of the labour and industry you have translated into your writing. It is not enough to be told bluntly where your work fails: you must know WHY, and HOW to remedy the faults.

The Criticism Service of THE AUTHORS' AID SERVICE embodies all these important factors in its constructive reports. Faults are pin-pointed with penetrating intuition and equal stress is given to literary merit.

Criticism, with that EXTRA SERVICE you need, is given on all types of script:—NOVELS, PLAYS, VERSE, SCENARIOS, TEXT-BOOKS, SHORT STORIES, ARTICLES, B.B.C. FEATURES, etc. Fees are moderate considering the qualifications of the AUTHORS' AID SERVICE Critics. All fees are by quotation. Without any obligation you are invited to send your MSS. for quotation.

WE CAN ALSO HELP YOU IN OTHER WAYS

We will revise your work if it is below standard, or if you are just beginning to find your literary feet. We will help you to finish that novel which is proving difficult in its final stages. We will help you to PLOT your new novel or your short stories. We will help you with markets. WHATEVER YOUR PROBLEM, write to us in confidence. Especial welcome is extended to Overseas and American writers.

New Writer: This is the first chance I've had to talk to a Fiction Editor. I'd like straight answers to . . .

Editor: The usual questions. All right—fire away.

New Writer: I think I've got it in me to write fiction. I'd have a go if I could be convinced that you're really looking for new writers.

Editor: But we are looking—always. There just aren't enough good storytellers to go round.

New Writer: I don't believe it. You must receive hundreds of MSS. every day.

Editor: We do. Most of them are hopeless. Some show promise. But they nearly all lack the essential technique.

New Writer: What do you mean by essential technique?

Editor: I can't very well explain technique in a sentence. Shall we say it's the reason why we have to import American stories when we'd rather encourage our own writers?

New Writer: What have the Americans got that so many British writers lack?

Editor: Technique. Their plots are no better than the hundreds of ideas people like you send every day. But they know how to present them—deftly and convincingly.

New Writer: Could I acquire this technique?

Editor: Yes; by trial and error—which takes years—or by getting skilled instruction.

New Writer: You mean a correspondence course?

Editor: Not just any correspondence course. You need to be taught by people who know their job.

New Writer: Can you recommend a reliable modern organisation with a proved record of success?

Editor: My advice to you is to write to the British Tutorial Institute for a copy of their handbook Saleable Writing. It's not at all like the usual prospectus and there's a lot of "inside information" in it that will probably surprise you. To start with, it tells you that . . . MAKE WRITING PAY

FOR the past thirty years the Premier School of Journalism has been teaching writers the technique of Press contribution and showing them how to "make writing pay." Pupils drawn from every walk of life, many without any previous experience whatever, have been enabled to make a profitable hobby or a full-time career of writing as a result of tuition.

Moreover, it has been shown that success is not dependent upon outstanding ability, but may be won by any man or woman who can write plain English and understand and cater for the interests of ordinary people. The reading public is not made up of a mass of minds of exactly the same calibre; taste in reading is as varied as taste in every other direction, and calls for writers of all types. There is plenty of room for the writer of modest ability as well as the genius.

It is the clear understanding of this fact and the consistent stressing of it in tuition that accounts for much of the spectacular success of Premier School students.

CRITICISM

The function of the critic pure and the critic-plus-teacher differs considerably. The first need give only a dispassionate assessment and leave it at that. The second, however, has a ~~much more personal role~~, and in Premier School tuition this is fully recognised. Frankness about the work in hand is essential, but with frank criticism must go encouragement—in the shape of constructive suggestions for moulding and developing faulty material until it takes more saleable shape. This is why many pupils who began with only a modest talent have developed into prominently successful writers.

The slogan of the Premier School of Journalism embodies the spirit of its teaching:

"OUR CHIEF WANT IN LIFE IS SOMEONE WHO SHALL MAKE US DO WHAT WE CAN. THIS IS THE SERVICE OF A FRIEND."
(Emerson)

The teaching is practical and thorough. Special methods of dealing with those bugbears of the writer—plot and subject finding—are features of the teaching, and throughout pupils are assisted with friendly advice and sound constructive criticism.

The School's teaching has produced remarkable results. Many pupils, with no previous experience, have earned material sums during tuition, in their spare time—£150 has been reported on several occasions. Others have been enabled to adopt writing as a profession and have earned incomes of from £800 to £2,000 a year.

Full details of the School's Courses in STORY WRITING, ARTICLE WRITING, VERSE WRITING, WRITING FOR CHILDREN, and PLAIN ENGLISH will be sent on application.

A DIRECTORY FOR WRITERS

PHOTOGRAPHERS AND COMPOSERS

FORTY-SECOND YEAR OF NEW ISSUE

ADAM AND CHARLES BLACK
4, 5 & 6 SOHO SQUARE LONDON W.1

PREFACE

THE first issues of a considerable number of new journals have appeared in the past year, and a number of new publishers have announced their "first lists." In the same period a not inconsiderable number of journals have published their last numbers, and several publishers have found themselves unable to meet their obligations and ceased business. The pages of the 1949 Writers' and Artists' Year Book reflect these and many other changes that have taken place since the publication of the last edition.

Both editing and publishing are trades requiring a high degree of skill, perception and application, but there is nothing to prevent anyone however unsuitable, unskilled or unscrupulous he may be, from trying his hand at either job, to the eventual dismay and disappointment of many writers and artists. The vast majority of publishers, journals, agents, etc., possess a high degree of business integrity, but "Vanity" publishers and unscrupulous agents still continue to exist.

WARNING TO AUTHORS AND OTHERS

Writers, artists, and others are urged to proceed with caution before submitting work to a firm about whom they know little or nothing. A precautionary step, which too few people take, is to send a preliminary letter. If a magazine or firm is overstocked, and many editors and publishers have enough work in cold storage for a long time ahead, they will usually say so. If no reply is received nothing is lost except a little time. When negotiating with such firms a similar caution should be observed.

The advice we have offered in the Year Book for many years past is repeated now with special emphasis:

Never pay for publication, whether it is for a book or a piece of music, or for setting a lyric to music. If work is worth publishing, sooner or later a publisher will recognise its merits and be prepared to publish it at his own expense

RATES 'OF' PAYMENT

A special effort is made to obtain rates of payment ~~ordered for~~ contributions by journals and magazines. Certain journals of the highest standing and reputation are reluctant, for reasons that are understandable, to state a standard rate of payment, since the value of a contribution may be dependent not upon length but upon the standing of the writer or of the information he has to give. Many journals give a rate of payment indicating that it is a minimum rate; others, in spite of efforts to extract the information from them, prefer to state "usual terms" or "by arrangement." Although the cost of living has risen considerably during the past years, in the majority of cases the payment offered by journals and magazines has failed to keep pace and indeed in some cases is lamentably small. Writers, artists and others are urged not to accept less than a fair price for their work, and, moreover, to ascertain exactly what rights they are being asked to dispose of when an offer is made.

It must be recorded that in the past year, complaints have been received of the dilatoriness of a small number of journals in dealing with MSS. and in making payments for contributions accepted and published. The information in the entries for journals, etc., in the Year Book is supplied by the journal or firm concerned and while the publishers of the Year Book cannot hold themselves responsible for statements made, they will be glad to be informed of any cases where statements relating to requirements and rates of payment appear to be incorrect.

Authors and others are strongly recommended to keep a careful record of all work sent out. A simple table for this purpose is suggested on page 325 of the Year Book.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Once again we must record our grateful thanks to the publishers, editors of journals, literary agents, and others through whose friendly co-operation it is possible to keep the information in the Year Book reliable and up to date. A proof of each entry is submitted annually for correction, and it is gratifying that in almost every case proofs have been returned. The omission of a journal from the Year Book is not due to any editorial preference or partisanship but to the fact that it offers little or no scope for the free-lance writer or artist. Here we may add that we are always glad to consider the inclusion of new journals which have escaped our notice, and we welcome any corrections or suggestions for the further improvement of the Year Book.

THE REPORT ON THE LAW OF LIBEL

J. A. Crockett, author of An Outline of the Law of Libel (see page 298), writes: The recently published report by the Lord Chancellor's Committee on the Law of Libel criticised the present law particularly as to its tendency to be "too severe upon the defendant who is innocent of any intention to defame" and also as to its liability "to stifle discussion upon matters of public interest and concern." The principal recommendations affecting the author and journalist are:

(i) In cases of unintentional libel the plaintiff's remedy should be restricted to requiring the defendant to publish an explanation and apology and when that has been done no damages should be recoverable.

(ii) A defendant should be entitled to succeed in a defence of justification if he proves that so substantial a portion of the defamatory allegations are true that any remaining allegations which have not been proved to be true do not add materially to the injury to the plaintiff's reputation. The defence of fair comment should be broadened in the same way.

(iii) The defence of qualified privilege should be extended by including monthly journals in the definition of "newspaper" and extending the category of reports entitled to such privilege to include the wide range of public bodies and quasijudicial tribunals which have now come into existence.

CAN SCIENCE HELP . . . ?

Well, surely . . . as Dr. Joad would say . . . it depends on the science. There are two kinds of science: quantitative and qualitative. We have never claimed that fiction-writing has been reduced to an exact or quantitative science and we cannot imagine how decimals or set-squares could be applied to it. The Science of Fiction-writing is qualitative—a science in the same category as, for example, Domestic Science, Eugenics, and Psychology.

"The subject-matter of Lecture 1 is truly amazing, and no novice would credit that the devising of a plot, which before had seemed such an intricate process, could be reduced to such a simple scientific formula."—R. E.

"This makes a total of 13 stories sold in 1945; money received from same, £81 18s. 3d. That is good, considering I had sold no fiction in 1944."—R. G. F.

"I sent the story to the GIRL'S OWN PAPER and got two surprises. It was accepted first time out for £6 6s. . . . splendid payment for a 2000 word children's story. The second surprise was a most encouraging letter asking for as many more of the same type as I care to submit." (Later): "May I say how glad I am that the further girl's story sold first time out to G.O.P. There we are then, all square on the course fees with a couple of guineas left over!"—W. L. J.

"I confess it was with the utmost scepticism that I sent my short story, 'He Went to Harley Street,' to CHAMBERS'S JOURNAL as you advised. It seemed to me that we were aiming rather high. I am delighted to tell you that it has been accepted."—Dr. E. G.

"I have great pleasure in informing you that as a result of a careful study of Lectures 2 and 3 two child stories I have written have been accepted by RADIO EIREANN for broadcasting."—B. J. O.

Please accept my warmest thanks for the cheque for £18 9s. 8d., received today in respect of your excellent sale of 'The Constant Heart' to BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE."—D. M.

"The editor of WOMAN'S ILLUSTRATED has offered me six guineas for 'Through Susan's Eyes' and says it is an excellent story. That is the fourth story I've sold since starting the course." (Later): "I was rather pleased to be asked by the editress of WOMAN'S COMPANION to write a series of six short stories about children for her paper." (Later): "I was very pleased to hear that I had sold a story to PSYCHOLOGY last week."—Mrs. P. M.

"Through my letterbox came a slim envelope . . . 'Dear Sir, we like your story 'Witch Child' very much and will be glad to offer you ten guineas for it for use in ARGOSY.'"—K. C. S.

"Three more acceptances. This makes £14 10s. in eleven weeks." (Later): "Last month's receipts alone amounted to £40 15s. This means that after completing six lessons with you I have earned £70."—J. W.

"The System is better than any other I have ever heard of, especially the method of Stages, which gives one the confidence of knowing what to do, and how to do it. There is something to guide one, something tangible for one to hold on to."—O. W. C. Remember, we apply scientific principles even to ourselves: we take the Course fee PLUS 10 per cent of your sales, thus ENSURING our maximum efforts on your behalf. The London School of Journalism was established by journalists and authors and is under the direct patronage of the leading newspaper proprietors. It is staffed by journalists and authors and its Courses are the production of many journalists, authors and editors.

Special Fees

For the present the Directors have arranged special terms to assist those whose incomes have not advanced with the rising cost of living. Students are now accepted at reduced fees, and there is no curtailment of any kind. These reduced fees apply to:

1. The Full Course in Journalism for those adopting newspaper work as a career.
2. The Free-Lance Course.
3. The Short Story Course.
4. The Poetry Course.
5. The Radio Play Course.
6. The Grammar Course.
7. The English Literature Course (by L. A. G. Strong).
8. The English History Course (by J. Hampden Jackson).

Writing is a form of expression which brings numerous rewards. Monetary return is one, and to many people the most important of them, but in addition there is the very important consideration that the study of article or story writing develops the mind, and no one in these days can neglect the cultural side of life.

Free advice is given to all who are considering a Course and the Informative book "Writing for the Press" will be sent, free, to all enquiries addressed to:—

TERRANCE M. BESSANT & BASIL HOGARTH

THE authors of The Technique of Novel Writing (published by The Bodley Head), How to Write Plays (Pitman), Writing Thrillers for Profit (A. & C. Black), and Free Lance (Pitman), offer you an intensely personal training in authorship.

YOU will not have your talent stretched on a Procrustean bed to fit in with stereotyped lessons and exercises. On the contrary, you are free to submit MSS. of your own choice, and work at your own pace throughout an association.

YOU will not be confined to one literary form—story writing or article writing; you may experiment in all the short literary forms, and, by a process of supervised trial and error, you will thus learn far more about the technique of writing than is possible under any other method.

THE collaborators are the authors of twenty-seven full-length books, hundreds of short stories, magazine articles and critical essays. Their literary reputation is an assurance that your talent will be developed along lines individual to your own unique needs and personality.

FEES are inclusive and surprisingly moderate. A stamp will bring you free literature—without obligating you in any way.

PRACTICE . . .

. . . Elsewhere in this Year Book we give details of the theoretical part of our service for writers. Here we wish to talk about practicalities.

Allow us, then, to give you some facts about what we have done for other writers (some of them "big shots" now), let us tell you something about what we can do for you. Above all, let us tell you what we cannot do. If you have no aptitude at all for the craft of writing then we can do nothing and we plainly tell you so. But if you have "something of the gift," however small and undeveloped your latent talent may be now, much is possible with hard work on your part and upon ours.

Which brings us to some extracts from recent letters, all of them representative of the dozens that come in every week.

J. M. S. writes: "Since my last letter I have sold every word that has come off my typewriter. . . . I am humbly grateful."

A very prominent London Literary Agent has this to say about a student introduced to him. . . . "Mrs. X's work is selling well, I think she is a writer of considerable promise and it reflects great credit on you."

"Thank you for your splendid letter, criticism, etc., I did not expect so much, I can tell you. It was meaty!" (R. G. C.)

"I can't say all the things I would like to say without sounding like one of your advertisements so I'll confine myself to saying that it's been enormous fun. More practically, I've made over £100." (N. D.)

"Every story I sent you, with one exception, has since sold. Indeed the Course had more than paid for itself by the fourth lesson." (T. J. D.)

"Excellent news, two more acceptances . . . both in markets you considered the best bet out of several you suggested." (R. A. B.)

"I know that my success was due entirely to your tuition. I started from scratch but with complete confidence in my tutors, and I think it says a good deal for the soundness of your Course that you have brought my work up to printable standard in five lessons." (E. J.)

Representative only, as we say. And we do not print some of the more extraordinary ones: many of them refer to very private circumstances and must be held inviolate.

There are K.K. Courses in Short Story, Article and Radio Writing and the tuition is strictly individual, fully collaborative and above all enthusiastic. The fees are moderate, as witness F. L. B. who writes: "I was greatly surprised, not to say delighted, by the K.K. terms. Don't advertise yourselves as expensive types again!" (We were not aware that we ever had, but let it pass!)

Please write us for full particulars. There is, of course, no obligation whatsoever. If you would like an opinion upon some work of yours, then send us a short MS. with a stamped addressed envelope for its return. Really short if you please, and be prepared for utter frankness; we do not pull our punches and have no wish to waste either your time or our own.

The partners are KOBOLD KNIGHT and Lt.-Col. W. N. GRIFFITHS (who directs the studies). Between them they have contributed, and contribute now, to something like one hundred periodicals here and overseas, written published novels (as opposed to those novels that never reach a reader!), provided some of the best technical books available, had work broadcast in three continents.

And the address is:

The Poetry Lovers' Fellowship (President: Walter de la Mare) announces in its "Poetry and Science" Series, a new volume,

POETIC TECHNIQUE

Stream and Structure in English Poetry [By OLIVER C. DE C. ELLIS]

The Stresses of Returning Rhythms must be the sole foundations of a genuine English prosody. This musical science involves some recollection, much variation and periodic return. "Nature's" habit is to couple everything in Two-time: out and back. Accurate metronomic One-time is a man-made repetition and does not occur in animate "Nature."

Rocking-Time in song is popular throughout life. Analysis of examples. Personal rhythms. Commonly accepted rhythms. The agreed rhythms of English speech. Vogue of mis-stressing on the Wireless a grave threat to the skeletal structure of our language. Children's basic tune in the multiplication tables.

Marching-Time, Four-Time, is Two-Time modulated upon a Two-Time. Four gives solidity and stability. Four fours, 16, form a tune. Four fours of triplets give us a waltz. Nurse's 3-lilt has always 2-way movement. Child's 3-movement ball-game soon adds a rest and lapses into 4. Man creates 3-time as a sophistication, foreign to "Nature."

Stresses in the Silence. Similarly, into his basic 16 tune-form, he introduces as many as 6 pauses. The 8 : 8, 8 : 7, 8 : 6, 8 : 5, 8 : 4, 8 : 3, 8 : 2, are all 8 : 8 with separate basic tunes (which of course the sense-rhythm must dominate or supplant). When the normal pre-Marlowe "fourteener" was superseded by the normal 10 (5 spoken stresses + 3 beats in the silence) 1, 2, 3, 4, V, —, —, —, the line contained its own return and became independent of the stanzaic rhythm of pattern. Collins' unrhymed 5, 5, 3, 3, and Longfellow's unrhymed hexameters and tetrameters are based also on the satisfaction of 4.

Complicated Patterns must also satisfy 4. Sonnets (8 : 6 in lines), Spenserians, etc., inventively employ and manipulate the discovered rhythms of "Nature." Analysis of patterns devised by various poets. The freedom of the Ode. Full explanation of scansion by stresses.

The Stream. The pattern may be static, but the poetry is dynamic. Progress through a poem. The poet's world. The searchlight of directed attention illustrated from the worlds of numerous poets.

The Composition of English Poetry [By GEOFFREY JOHNSON]

Indispensable rudiments. Humility and Industry. Fundamental spadework. English Grammar. Bible as literature. Shakespeare. Anthologies (Palgrave, O.B.E.V., etc.). Major poets studied separately. Standards and Touchstones. English Composition. Examples for guidance and avoidance. Inversion. Originality and Showiness. Rhyme not a fetter but a help. Rhymes that are abominable. Successful mingling of end-stop and overflow. Rhymeless verse. So-called free verse. Rhythm. Placing of Pause. Spontaneous patterning of consonants and sequences of vowels. Twenty-two admonitions as guiding generalisations.

A study of the coming of inspiration. Bogus stimulation. Receptiveness. Signs of genuine afflatus. Germ of a poem intuitive and emotional. Composition as a necessary catharsis. Inflow of lines into the mind. Distinction between the aesthetic longing to create and the genuine creative drive. Sincerity not enough. Self-cajolement out of barren moods. Playing with words and phrases. Supremacy of the authentic vision.

Five rules of self-criticism. Freshness of vision. Re-clothing the commonplace with wonder. Common illusions about poetic character. Present debasement of critical standards. Intrusion of cant, jargon, argot, and the gross. Parrot-cry of Escapism. Sterility of mere repetitive imitation. Poems about poems or literary characters, cocoons spun round ghosts. Self-repetition in theme. Memorableness and quotability.

Symbolisms private and universal. Balance of imagination and judgement, of the emotional and the rational. The fire and the file. Value of after-thoughts. Discipline and over-writing.

The Rendering of English Verse [By CHRISTABEL BURNISTON]

INTRODUCTION. The essentials: sensibility, sincerity, intelligence. The poet's own oral impotence. Precision of auditory images.

TECHNIQUE. Voice: Standards; pitfalls. Articulation: Glottal stops and shocks; intruded R; omitted R; neutral vowel; over-carefulness. Local Accent and Standard English: Value of each in proper place; acceptability; intelligibility; vitality.

AESTHETIC RESPONSE. Rhythm: Insistent Rhythm. Dancing Rhythm. Domination of Sense-Rhythm. With graphs illustrating scansion of e.g. "Sprung" Rhythm.

Cadence: Musical patterns of speech; surrealist and natural effects; repetition, balance, and parallelism of cadences.

Onomatopoeia: The obvious and the subtle; use and abuse.

CHORAL SPEAKING. Choice of material. Study of material. Work and responsibility of conductor. Grouping of voices. Orchestration. Opportunities and limitations.

THE LYRIC. Submission to the poet's mood. Range from simple carol, wholly subject to verse-rhythm, to the profound ode, wholly subject to sense-rhythm. Table, showing broad gamut narrowing to a more compact range as menial depth increases. Proper printing.

DRAMATIC VERSE. Fusion of actor's personality with the assumed character. How spontaneity is to be achieved. Variety of pace. Use of pause. Reading between the lines. Gesture and facial expression. Types of emphasis. Emphasis achieved by contrast. Special difficulties of dramatic verse: extremes of treatment and other pitfalls; danger of trick-production assuming greater importance than nobility of language.

SOCIETY OF NEW AUTHORS

NEW authors are invited to submit MSS.—short stories, features, and poetry—for the coming issue of SONA, a literary periodical designed to bring to the public's notice new names, new talent.

FOR those who are not yet established, for those who are just beginning a literary life, SONA offers an introduction to print. Its policy is simple: to encourage, perhaps inspire, the new author to express himself at a time of condensed and closed markets. Known names are unwanted: SONA is for the newcomer to literary endeavour.

SONA, a "members only" journal, is the magazine of the Society of New Authors membership of which costs a guinea a year and carries with it free criticism of work selected. For full details of the Society which can help you to fame, write to the

THE CROSS HILLS TYPEWRITING & LITERARY BUREAU

Complete Service:

TYPING · CRITICISM · REVISION · MARKETS

Publishers, Editors, Novelists and Journalists express their unqualified appreciation of our Service.

Mr. Michael Hervey has been described as one of the most dynamic and prolific writers of our time. The author of 1,000 short stories and 20 successful plays, his novels alone have sold over 4,000,000 copies. The Bureau has revised and polished scores of Mr. Hervey's short stories, and he writes of our Service:

"I have tried a great number of Agencies in my time, but I have yet to find one that compares with yours in any way. The service your Bureau offers can only be described as perfect. I shall continue to send my work to you as long as my type-writer holds out."—Michael Hervey, Prittwell, Essex.

Mr. Ronald Horton is the author of more than one hundred short stories and a regular contributor to the Sunday Chronicle and Messrs. Newspaper Features, Ltd. He sent a rejected story to the Bureau for revision. In less than a week he reported:

"The story you revised, HERBERT EXERTS HIMSELF, has been taken by Weekly Telegraph by return of post. I want to say—without any suspicion of 'soft-soaping'—that your revision is the best I have ever seen."—Ronald Horton, Pinxton, Nottingham.

The Editor of a well-known gardening weekly writes:

"The revision of my article amazed me. I have been an Editor for two years and Assistant Editor for five, and I know what I am talking about. Believe me, I regard your work as being of the very highest standard."—G. B., Salop.

The Bureau is equally successful with beginners. In 1948, their articles and short stories appeared in no less than 200 leading British magazines.

Mr. Harry Main was over sixty when he took up writing. On November 3rd, 1948, he reported: "The three stories you have revised for me have all been accepted. The latest, LOST IN THE STRATOSPHERE, has been included in Swan's Scramble Annual for 1949."—H. Main, Thrussington, Leicester.

Mr. L. Rothera reported on October 30th: "Of the 12 articles revised for me since July, this year, seven sold immediately and I still await decisions regarding the other five. My articles have appeared in Answers, Home Review, Householder, Sporting Investor, Home Magazine, Modern Mystic and Scribe. I find your revision indispensable. It is the last word in efficiency."—L. Rothera, Leeds.

D. E. Watlington, has been even more successful. He writes:

"You have revised over 40 articles for me, and every one has been accepted. The payment has been excellent. In one instance I received seven guineas for an article of one thousand words, and two to four guineas for most of the others. Better still, Editors are asking me for articles. Needless to say, the credit is due to you."

Original testimonials sent on application.

Typing, 1/5 1,000 words. Criticism, 2/6 1,000 words.

SIR CEDRIC HARDWICKE writes:—

I accept the terms for my Memoirs "Let's Pretend," and considering that this is my first book, the advance royalty you have obtained is most satisfactory.

Thank you for £4 4s. od. for my brief sketch, "The Fourth Estate," which works out at half-a-guinea per 100 words. Many of us have to be content with half-a-guinea per thousand! This little sketch had already been turned down in editorial quarters where I submitted it. I feared it was a dead loss.

(Signed) NEIL GOW.

The chief contributory factor to the acceptance of "The Clueless Trail" is, without question, the meticulous care you took in reading a typescript of 116,000 words by one who had no previous experience in novel writing, and your insistence on the story being cut down to reasonable commercial length. Besides this you lightened my task by pointing out where the condensations could be made to the best advantage. It is authoritative and "straight from the shoulder" methods like yours that avoid much disappointment and waste of time both to authors and publishers.

OVERSEAS NEWSPAPERS

MANY excellent newspapers are published in the larger towns throughout the Empire. To give a full list, which could never be kept up to date, of many hundreds of papers would be impossible within the confines of this year book, and quite useless to a would-be contributor. Many of the more important papers have a London office. It is usual for MSS. from free-lance writers to be submitted to the editorial office overseas.

Most of the big newspapers depend for news mainly on their own staffs. The most important papers have permanent representatives who keep them supplied, not only with news of purely Dominion and Colonial interest, but with a weekly summary of English news and articles on events of special importance.

The Overseas market for stories and articles is small. For the most part newspapers and dailies buy their stories, as the smaller papers buy their general articles, through one or other of the well-known syndicates. Magazines published overseas often prefer their fiction to have a local setting.

If disappointment is to be avoided, would-be contributors should beware of small magazines of an ephemeral nature. This advice applies particularly to the lesser periodicals of India and Pakistan.

A preliminary letter is advisable, and acquaintance with the magazine to which it is desired to send contributions is essential.

In addition to journals which offer opportunities to freelance writers, the principal newspapers are also included.

AMERICAN JOURNALS AND MAGAZINES

Every effort is made to verify each paper in this list, but this year (1949) many American editors have failed to return the revised proofs and duplicates sent to them. In dealing with minor papers, contributors are advised to communicate by letter, and await reply, before posting MSS.

NOTE.—MSS. (with or without illustrations) and their stamped return envelopes, or international postage coupons, should not be sent separately, but with the covering letter. It is necessary, when selling to a U.S.A. periodical, to be clear what rights are being sold, for certain Editors like to purchase MSS. outright, thus securing world copyright. MSS. should not be sent to the London office of any U.S.A. publication. All MSS. should be registered.

Attention should also be given to the difficulties of obtaining simultaneous issue to secure copyright, especially as regards book publication.

Contributors, who do not retain a specific market in the U.S.A., are recommended to make a careful study of those publications that are preponderantly American in their appeal. In fact each magazine should be studied before MSS. are submitted.

In certain top-ranking American magazines collaboration between author and editor is becoming more and more extensive. The editor likes to have for his consideration a full preliminary synopsis, which should be about 500 words in length. The synopsis should indicate the scope and plan of the article, its title and length, and how it will be handled (i.e. whether "factual, informative" or "founded on special information"). This note is based on information brought back by Miss Phyllis Bentley from a recent visit to America. "Whether British writers," she says, "will wish to follow this method or not I do not know, but it seems worth while bringing it to their notice and urging them to try it. It entails some extra trouble, but on the other hand it prevents the waste of writing unacceptable work—unacceptable, too, perhaps only because of some accidental coincidence of topics, some omission of desired detail, or some stress of an already too familiar angle."

PUBLISHERS

BRITISH AND IRISH PUBLISHERS

Authors are strongly advised not to pay for the publication of their work. If a MS. is worth publishing, a reputable publisher will undertake its publication at his own expense. In this connection attention is called to the article on Publishers Agreements on page 300, and to Sir Stanley Unwin's article on p. 301.

Care should be taken to select a suitable publisher. Before submitting a MS. make certain that the firm you have in mind does in fact publish other books of a similar nature. Some publishers, for instance, have no fiction in their list, others publish only fiction. In most cases in the list below publishers have indicated the subjects in which they are interested.

At the present time most publishers' plans are made for a long time ahead, and it is advisable to send a preliminary letter before submitting a MS.

Publishers are asked to send in notes of the kind of MSS. they chiefly desire, so that this list may be made increasingly useful to authors.

AGENTS

LITERARY AGENTS

MANY literary agents have a well-deserved reputation for their integrity in dealing with authors and publishers. There have been in the past, however, many discreditable and unsatisfactory agents, and some of the leading agents are concerned to form an association of literary agents to uphold the standard of professional conduct. Until such an association is formed, all writers needing the services of a literary agent are advised in their own interests to make preliminary enquiries and to ascertain terms of work before submitting MSS. Commission is never less than 10 per cent for book-length MSS., and 15 per cent for shorter work and is sometimes more where special services are offered.

The P.E.N. was founded in 1921 by C. A. Dawson Scott. Its objects are to promote and maintain friendship and intellectual co-operation between writers in every country, in the interests of freedom of artistic expression and international goodwill. The P.E.N. is open to every writer of standing, without distinction of creed or race, who subscribes to these fundamental principles. The P.E.N. takes no part in party politics. The aims of the P.E.N. are summarised in these two quotations from speeches by former Presidents: "We writers of the P.E.N. want to serve humanity at large in the ways (perhaps the only ways) in which the written word and the makers thereof can serve humanity, by linking up country by country the love of literature and by helping to restore to a bleak and starved world a friendly atmosphere" (John Galsworthy, 1932). "We of the P.E.N. are united upon this fundamental thing, we stand for faith in the freely-thinking, freely-speaking, free-writing mind. . . . Faced with the uproar and violence of contemporary affairs, the P.E.N. in its own fashion maintains the concept of an intellectual and aesthetic world republic; it asserts its faith in the ultimate triumph of the free brotherhood of mankind" (H. G. Wells, 1936).

The London Centre meets monthly at discussions, lectures, dinners, luncheons, and has organised several large-scale congresses, one, in August 1944, to celebrate the Tercentenary of Milton's Areopagitica lasted five days. Distinguished writers and others are entertained. The P.E.N. has given much care to refugee writers from Austria, Germany, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Spain and other countries and has raised funds on their behalf.

Annual international congresses of the P.E.N. have been held in most European capitals, as well as in New York and Buenos Aires. The last was in Denmark in 1948.

The initials P.E.N. stand for Poets, Playwrights, Editors, Essayists, Novelists; but membership is open to all writers of standing.

PRIZES AND AWARDS

LITERARY PRIZES AND AWARDS

THIS list does not include the competitive prizes offered from time to time by publishers and periodicals. A more recent innovation, the award of bursaries by publishers and other bodies, is the subject of a separate article. The number of literary prizes in Great Britain is small compared with America, where there are scores of literary awards.

THE JAMES TAIT BLACK MEMORIAL PRIZES

Among the most important in this country are the James Tait Black Memorial Prizes. These prizes were inaugurated by the late Mrs. Black in memory of her husband, James Tait Black, a partner in the publishing house of A. & C. Black, Ltd. A sum, which some years ago totalled £12,430, was set aside to be used for providing two prizes of whatever income the fund should produce after paying expenses, including a fee to the judge, for (First) the best biography or literary work of that nature of each year, and (Second) the best novel of each year, the choice to be made by the Professor of Literature of Edinburgh University, or failing him, the Professor of Literature in the University of Glasgow. The terms of the Bequest, which was drawn up without consulting literary opinion, place the award in the hands of one man. No one man could hear of, much less read, all the good biographies of the year, together with all the good novels, in order to choose from among them the best. A committee of competent people is a necessity if a literary prize is to count for anything. As will be understood, the prizes are not competitive. The awards are generally made in the year following publication of the books selected. The 1947 awards were made to Dr. C. E. Raven for his English Naturalists from Neckham to Ray and to Mr. L. P. Hartley for his novel Eustace and Hilda.

THE SOMERSET MAUGHAM TRUST FUND

The purpose of this annual award, which will be a sum of about £300, is to encourage our young writers to travel, to acquaint themselves with the manners and customs of foreign countries, and, by widening their own experience, to extend both the basis and the influence of contemporary English literature. It is Mr. Maugham's belief that, "if now and then a writer comes along who is so stimulated and strengthened by the experience which this prize will put within his reach that he can produce works that will enrich the common literature of the world, the experiment will have been well worth making." Mr. Maugham has urged that, in the selection of prize-winners, originality and promise should be the touchstones: he does not wish the judges to "play for safety" in their choice.

A candidate for the award must be a British subject by birth and ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom or Northern Ireland. He or she must, at the time of the award, be under thirty years of age, and must submit a published literary work in volume form in the English language, of which he or she is the sole author. The term "literary work" includes poetry, fiction, criticism, history and biography, belles lettres, or philosophy, but does not include a dramatic work. A candidate who wins an award must undertake to spend not less than three months outside Great Britain and Ireland, and to devote the prize to the expenses of this sojourn.

The judges in the Somerset Maugham Trust Scheme are elected by the Society of Authors' Committee of Management, and each will normally hold his position on the board of judges for a maximum period of three years. The judges for the 1949 award are Miss C. V. Wedgwood, Mr. C. Day Lewis and Mr. V. S. Pritchett. Any questions relating to the terms of the award should be addressed to The Society of Authors, 84 Drayton Gardens, S.W.10, to which candidates should send the literary work they wish to submit for an award. Only one published work should be submitted by a candidate, and it must be accompanied by a statement of his or her age, place of birth, and other published works, and a remittance to cover the return of the book by post. Candidates may be asked to present themselves for an interview with the board of judges.

The closing date for the submission of books to be considered is December 31st of the preceding year.

The Award for 1948 was given to P. H. Newby on the strength of his promise and performance in general, and of his novel Journey to the Interior in particular.

THE HAWTHORNDEN PRIZE

The Hawthornden Prize, for which books do not have to be specially submitted, is awarded annually to the author of what, in the opinion of the Committee, is the best bit of imaginative work in prose or verse published during the preceding twelve months by a British author under forty-one years of age. The Prize is £100. It was founded by the late Miss Alice Warrender in 1919. The last award was made in 1944 to Martyn Skinner for Letters to Malaya.

THE STOCK PRIZE

The Stock (formerly Femina Vie Heureuse) Prize is of the value of £40, and is offered for what, in the opinion of the Committee, is the best work of imagination produced within a given time by one of the younger British authors or by one who is considered not to have received adequate recognition. There are confidential meetings during the year at which books are placed upon the voting list. At the final meeting, by a careful system of voting, the Committee makes a choice of three works to be sent to the French Committee for final adjudication. The same process applies to the reciprocal prize to France provided by Messrs. Heinemann, and known as The Heinemann Prize, when three French works are submitted to the English Committee for selection. No award has been announced since 1939.

JOHN LLEWELYN RHYS MEMORIAL PRIZE

In memory of John Llewelyn Rhys, who was killed whilst serving with the R.A.F. in August 1940, his widow has instituted a prize for young writers of promise, to whom a little money, and still more a little recognition at the beginning of their career, may mean so much.

A selection committee, which includes Mrs. Rhys, Emlyn Williams and Olaf Stapledon, awards the prize to the author of the literary work which in their opinion is the most memorable, whether in achievement or in promise. The work may be a novel, play, poem, short story or a non-fiction work, and the committee reserve the right to withhold the award when no entry of sufficient merit is received. An author wishing to submit a work for consideration must be a citizen of the British Empire and under thirty years of age at the time of its publication. The work must be submitted not later than April 1st in any one year, and must have been published for the first time during the previous calendar year. Copies will be returned only if requested. All entries and enquiries should be forwarded to 23 Maida Avenue, London, W.2. The prize for 1947 was awarded to Anne-Marie Walters for her book Moondrop to Gascony (Macmillan), and the prize for 1948 to Richard Mason for his novel The Wind Cannot Read (Hodder & Stoughton).

The Prize for 1945 was awarded to James Aldridge for his novel The Sea Eagle, published by Michael Joseph, and for 1946 to Oriel Malet for My Bird Sings, published by Faber & Faber.

EYRE AND SPOTTISWOODE LITERARY FELLOWSHIP

Eyre and Spottiswoode offer an annual fellowship of £500 to British writers, open for either fiction or non-fiction. £250 of this is prize money and £250 advance on royalties. At least half the proposed work must be submitted, together with particulars of the writer's age and career and of anything previously published. The adjudicators are Miss Elizabeth Bowen, Mr. V. S. Pritchett and Mr. Graham Greene.

The 1947 award was made to Mr. Anthony West for a novel entitled The Vintage, to be published in due course. No award was made for the 1948 submissions. Closing date for the 1949 award, June 30th, 1949.

THE TOM-GALLON TRUST

This Trust was founded by the late Miss Nellie Tom-Gallon and is administered by the Society of Authors. Every alternate year an award is made of a sum in the neighbourhood of £100 a year for two years, and goes to a fiction writer of limited means who in the Society's judgment is best qualified to benefit under the terms of the Trust. The 1949 Award will be for the two years beginning January 1st, 1950. The 1947 Award went to Miss Dorothy K. Haynes.

The conditions laid down by Miss Tom-Gallon as to the type of work that may be submitted for consideration are very wide; but the adjudicators bear in mind Miss Tom-Gallon's expressed preference for work of a traditional rather than of an experimental character.

Any author wishing to compete for the award must have had at least one short story accepted for publication.

THE ROSE MARY CRAWSHAY PRIZE

The Rose Mary Crawshay Prize is of the value of £100. It was originally founded, in 1888, by the late Rose Mary Crawshay, for yearly prizes on Byron, Shelley, and Keats. In 1915 the Scheme passed into the administration of a body of Trustees consisting of the President and Secretary of the British Academy, and others. The Prize may be awarded annually to a woman of any nationality who, in the judgment of the Council of the British Academy, has written or published within three calendar years next preceding the date of the Award an historical or critical work of sufficient value on any subject connected with English Literature, preference being given to a work regarding one of the poets Byron, Shelley, or Keats. If in the year two works of exceptional merit are deemed worthy of a Prize, a second Prize not exceeding £65 may be awarded. Communications may be addressed to the Secretary of the British Academy, Burlington Gardens, London, W.1. The latest award was made in 1947 to Miss Marjorie Nicolson for her book Newtons "Opticks" and the Eighteenth Century Poets.

THE CROMER GREEK PRIZE

The Cromer Greek Prize was founded by the late Lord Cromer with the view of encouraging the study of Greek. The Prize, which is competitive, is administered by the British Academy, and awarded for the best Essay on any subject connected with the language, history, art, literature, or philosophy of Ancient Greece. The Prize, which is ordinarily a sum of £40, is awarded annually in March. Competition is open to all British subjects who will be under twenty-six years of age on December 31st preceding the award. Copies of the rules governing the Cromer Prize may be obtained from the Secretary of the British Academy, Burlington Gardens, W.1.

THE LIBRARY ASSOCIATION CARNEGIE MEDAL

The Library Association Carnegie Medal is awarded for an outstanding book for children by an English author, published in England during the year. It was instituted by the Library Association, whose work owes so much to the benefactions of the Carnegie Trust, to commemorate the centenary of Andrew Carnegie's birth in 1835.

Recommendations for the award are made by the public libraries and the final decision rests with the council of the Library Association. Consideration is given not only to the literary quality and suitability of the work, but also to the type, paper, illustrations and binding. It should be added that the award is not necessarily restricted to books of an imaginative nature.

An award was made in 1947 to Mr. Walter de la Mare for Collected Stories for Children, published by Faber & Faber.

THE BLACKWELL PRIZE

The Blackwell Prize of approximately £75 is administered by the University of Aberdeen. This Prize is open to unrestricted competition. It is awarded in alternate years, and a different subject is selected each time. Essays, bearing a motto only, must be accompanied by a sealed envelope bearing the same motto and containing the writer's full name and address, and lodged with the Secretary to the University, from whom further details may be obtained.

THE BERTRAND STEWART PRIZE

£80 is given annually under the will of the late Captain Bertrand Stewart, a London solicitor, who was killed in the Battle of the Marne in September 1914, for the best essay on some military problem, the study or discussion of which would tend to increase the efficiency of the British Army as a fighting force.

The competition is open to British subjects who have served or are serving as officers or in other ranks or ratings of the fighting Services, including the Navy and Royal Marines, the Regular Army Special Reserve, Territorial Army and Militia, the Royal Air Force, the Naval, Military, and Air Forces of India, the Dominions, and the Colonies.

Full particulars are published in the Army Quarterly.

THE FELICIA HEMANS PRIZE

The Felicia Hemans Prize consists of a bronze medal together with a sum of money (about £2). It is awarded annually for a lyrical poem, the subject of which may be chosen by the competitor. Open to past and present members of University College or of the University of Liverpool. The prize shall not be awarded more than once to the same competitor. Poems endorsed "Hemans Prize," must be sent in to the Registrar of Liverpool University on or before May 1st. Competitors may submit either published or unpublished verse, but no competitor may submit more than one poem.

EDWARD J. O'BRIEN SHORT STORY PRIZE

This prize, commemorating the late Edward O'Brien and his work for the short story, is awarded by the publishers and proprietors of English Story. The award is made after the publication of each alternate series of English Story for the best short story to appear in either that or the immediately preceding series. The value of the prize is £10.

W. H. HEINEMANN FOUNDATION FOR LITERATURE

The purpose of this Foundation is to encourage the production of literary works of real worth. The prize shall be deemed a reward for actual achievement.

Works in any branch of literature may be submitted to the verdict of the Royal Society of Literature which shall be final and without appeal.

Works of prose fiction shall not be excluded from competition, but the judges are requested to bear in mind that the Testator's intention is primarily to reward those classes of literature which are less remunerative, namely, poetry, criticism, biography, history, etc.

The recipient of a Prize shall not again be eligible for five years.

The Foundation being for the benefit of works of English Literature, it is the Testator's intention that the word "English" shall have its widest meaning and that any work originally written in the English language shall be eligible.

Works submitted by their authors will not be admitted, but those selected by their publishers will be welcome.

The awards for 1947 were made to Victoria Sackville-West for The Garden (Michael Joseph, Ltd.), and the Rt. Hon. Earl Russell for History of Western Philosophy (Allen & Unwin).

THE ROGERS PRIZE

The Rogers Prize, awarded by the University of London, may be said to be competitive in that it is open to all persons whose names appear on the Medical Register of the United Kingdom. The Prize consists of a sum of £100, and is awarded approximately every five years; it is given for an Essay or Dissertation on some Medical or Surgical subject, which shall be named by the University. For further information, application should be made to the Academic Registrar, University of London, The Senate House, W.C.1.

THE ALEXANDER PRIZE

Candidates for the Alexander Prize may choose their own subject for an Essay, but they must submit their choice for approval to the Literary Director, Royal Historical Society, 96 Cheyne Walk, S.W.10.

THE NOBEL PRIZE

The Nobel Prize in Literature is one of the Foundations created by the will of the late Alfred Nobel, the Swedish scientist who invented dynamite. The awarding authority is the Swedish Academy (for Literature), and particulars concerning conditions, etc., can be obtained from Nobelstiftelsens Styrelse, Sturegatan 14, Stockholm. No direct application for a prize will, however, be taken into consideration. It was bestowed upon Rudyard Kipling in 1907, upon W. B. Yeats in 1923, upon George Bernard Shaw in 1925, and upon John Galsworthy in 1932. The Nobel Prizes are understood to be worth about £11,000 each. They number five: (a) Physics, (b) Chemistry, (c) Medicine or Physiology, (d) Literature, and (e) the Preservation of Peace.

THE S. H. PRIOR MEMORIAL PRIZE

The S. H. Prior Memorial Prize consists of a sum of £100 awarded annually for an outstanding contribution to Australian literature. Entries, which close on June 6th of each year, are limited to the published work of Australian authors, and are judged by a panel of selected judges. (Australian for this purpose means born or naturalised in Australasia, New Zealand, or the British South Pacific islands or a bona fide resident of any of these places for the two years preceding the closing date.) All queries, and communications to be addressed to the Trustees, S. H. Prior Memorial Prize, Bulletin Office, 252 George Street, Sydney, N.S.W.

THE DAVID BERRY PRIZE

Candidates for the David Berry Prize of a Gold Medal and £50 may select any subject dealing with Scottish History within the reigns of James I to James VI inclusive, provided such subject has been previously submitted to and approved by the Council of the Royal Historical Society, 96 Cheyne Walk, S.W.10.

THE IRISH ACADEMY

The Irish Academy of Letters offers two prizes annually:—

(1) The Harmsworth Award of £100 for the best work of imaginative literature by an Irish author. (2) The Casement Award of £50 for the best book of verse or the best play by an Irish author. (This prize alternates each year between poetry and plays.)

The address of the Academy is the Abbey Theatre, Dublin, and the Hon. Secretary is I. M. Hone.

A number of prizes are also offered by certain schools of journalism, details of which are advertised in the Press. The annual literary prizes of America are not as a rule open to Britishers.

THE DENYSE CLAIROUIN PRIZE

After the death of Denyse Clairouin in Ravensbruck prison camp this prize was founded by many of her friends to encourage the appreciation of international literature, a work to which Denyse Clairouin devoted much of her life.

The American award for 1947 was made to Professor Justin O'Brien for his translation The Journals of André Gide; the French prize to Pierre Leyris for his translation of T. S. Eliot's Poems, 1910-1930; and the British prize for 1948 to Rosamond Lehmann for her translation of Geneviève by Jacques Lemarchand.

POETRY SOCIETY PRIZES

POETRY REVIEW MONTHLY PREMIUM

A premium of £10 is offered for the best poem or poems submitted to the Premium Editor during the month (without limitation of subject). Not more than two lyrics or one long poem should be submitted. MSS. should reach "The Premium Editor, THE POETRY REVIEW, 33 Portman Square, London, W.1," by the 9th of the month. It is essential that entrants to this competition be members of The Poetry Society or registered subscribers to THE POETRY REVIEW, and that each poem bears the name and address of the author marked "For Premium Competition." Entrance fee: 2s. 6d.

THE GREENWOOD PRIZE FOR 1949

The Poetry Society is empowered by the executors of the late Mrs. Julia Wickham Greenwood to offer the sum of £20 as the Shirley Carter Greenwood Prize for 1949 for the best single poem in open competition addressed "The Greenwood Premium, 33 Portman Square, London, W.1," before July 31st; only one poem to be submitted by any one competitor, length not exceeding 250 lines; no previously published poem may be entered; full name and address of author must be given on each poem and a stamped addressed envelope enclosed. (If a nom-de-plume is adopted, name and address of sender must be given in a closed envelope bearing the pseudonym.) The winning poem shall be printed in THE POETRY REVIEW and may be reprinted at the discretion of the Poetry Society and the adjudicator may reserve near winners for publication in THE POETRY REVIEW. This annual prize is one of a high authority and significance.

COMPETITION FOR A LOVE LYRIC

The Poetry Society offers an annual premium of £10 for an original Love Lyric to be published in this magazine in the spring of each year. The form is without restriction, but the length must not exceed thirty lines. Competitors must be members of the Poetry Society. All entries should be typewritten and bear the name and address of the sender, and be addressed to "Love Lyric" Comp., 33 Portman Square, London, W.1, before January 31st. The winning poem or poems will be published in THE POETRY REVIEW, without prejudice to later publication by the author elsewhere.

COMPETITION FOR POEMS OF PLACE

Mrs. A. Dorothy Holmes, a Shropshire member of The Poetry Society, offers £10 annually in competition for poems of place. Competitors, who must be members of The Poetry Society, may submit not more than two poems.

Less than a hundred lines should suffice, and songs and lyrics rather than factual narrative poems are preferred. All entries for the 1949 competition must be type-written and bear the name and address of the author, and must be addressed to "The Holmes Prize, THE POETRY REVIEW, 33 Portman Square, London, W.1," not later than April 1st. The judges may divide the prize money at their discretion.

A PETRARCHAN SONNET COMPETITION IN MEMORY OF LORD ALFRED DOUGLAS

The Poetry Society has instituted an annual sonnet competition in memory of Lord Alfred Douglas.

The prize of £10 may be divided at the discretion of the adjudicators; the winning poem or poems will be published with the award in the Sept.-Oct. issue of THE POETRY REVIEW in commemoration of Lord Alfred's birthday, October 22nd. Competitors must not submit more than two sonnets; closing date June 30th. Each sonnet must have a title and definite subject and not be labelled merely "Sonnet." Details of the sonnet form to be used may be obtained on application to The Poetry Society.

MARKETS SECTION

MARKETS FOR WRITERS

MORE than a thousand journals are included in the British Journals section of the Year Book, almost all of them offering opportunities to the writer, some in greater measure than in others. Some 350 leading Dominion, Colonial and American journals are also included, and while most of these have little space for free-lance contributions, many of them will always consider outstanding work.

Over 500 British publishers are included, as well as some 230 overseas publishers, all of them ready to consider work by new writers.

The advice we would offer to all writers is to study their market carefully. Many publishers include no fiction in their list, yet numerous manuscripts are submitted to them by writers who have not taken sufficient trouble to ascertain: (a) do Messrs. Blank publish fiction? (b) and equally important, do they publish the sort of fiction I have written? A novel suitable for Mills and Boon is unlikely to be acceptable to Macmillans, and vice-versa. Similarly an article or short-story suitable for New Writing is unlikely to appeal to the readers of Good Taste. The importance of studying the market cannot be over-emphasised. It is an editor's job to know what his readers want, and to see that they get it. Thus free-lance contributions must be tailored to fit a specific market; subject, theme, treatment, length, etc., must meet the editor's requirements.

The Classified Index at the end of the Year Book provides a rough guide to markets. It must be used with discrimination, and whenever possible it is always desirable to examine a copy of a journal if you are not familiar with it, and are submitting a MS. to the editor of it for the first time.

Most publishers have a full programme, with a long list of books awaiting reprinting. Even so, first class MSS. of almost every category will find a publisher. Here it must again be emphasised: take care to choose a suitable publisher, and remember that a reputable publisher will undertake all financial risk of publication, except possibly for works of an academic nature.

MARKETS FOR PLAYS

THE number of new plays produced in the West End continues to be distressingly small. In the past year theatres on the fringe of the West End and in the suburbs have sponsored many brave new ventures, but few of the plays have been found good enough for transfer to the West End. After several years of valuable pioneer work at the Embassy Theatre, Mr. Anthony Hawkey declares that there are insufficient good new plays to justify the continuance of his policy, and he proposes to concern himself in future mainly with revivals with fewer new plays in his programme.

The Company of Four at the Lyric Theatre, Hammersmith, the Lindsey, the Chanticleer, and the Gateway are among those which have produced work by new or comparatively unknown writers. In the provinces many repertory groups have included new plays in their programmes, often with the encouragement and support of the Arts Council.

It is probable that competitions for full-length and one-act plays and other special opportunities for new plays will be announced after the YEAR BOOK has gone to press, and writers with plays on the stocks would do well to watch carefully for announcements in the Press. The theatre column of The Observer, The Author, The Writer, John o' London's Weekly, Drama, New Theatre, Theatre To-day and Theatre News Letter (77 Dean Street, London, W.1.) are the journals in which announcements are most likely to appear.

Sketches for revues, concert parties, and broadcasting, and plays for youth organisations are in demand. Sketches are usually bought outright, but in any case authors should make quite certain of what rights they will be disposing before accepting any offer.

In every case it is advisable to send a preliminary letter before submitting a manuscript. Suggestions for the preparation of manuscripts will be found on page 324 of the YEAR BOOK.

Writers of plays are also referred to Censorship of Plays on page 307, and to About the Sale of a Play on page 308.

MARKETS FOR SCENARIOS

Markets for scenarios are extremely limited. Most of the larger film companies maintain editorial departments, whose job is to search out literary material suitable for the cinema. They are usually in close touch with publishers and agents and little that is outstanding escapes their notice. Nevertheless there may be occasional openings for the freelance writer in the general market, and more frequent opportunities for children's and documentary films.

THE BRITISH FILM INSTITUTE

The general object of the British Film Institute is "to encourage the use and development of the cinematograph as a medium of entertainment and instruction," and in its sixteen years of existence—it was founded in October 1933—it has done much to justify the hopes of its founders. The scope of the Institute includes every type of film, films for entertainment as well as films with a cultural and educational value. Through its Information Bureau, which answers many thousands of questions annually on every aspect of the cinema, and through its various reports and other publications, the Institute is of great value to writers dealing with film matters. The annual subscription to the Institute (to June 30th) is £1 10s. (with all literature published during the year, £2 2s.); and after December 31st, 15s. The address of the Institute is 164 Shaftesbury Avenue, W.C.2. T. Temple Bar 1642.

WRITING FOR THE FILMS

Markets for scenarios are extremely limited. Most of the larger film companies maintain editorial departments, whose job is to search out literary material suitable for the cinema. They are usually in close touch with publishers and agents and little that is outstanding escapes their notice. Nevertheless there may be occasional openings for the freelance writer in the general market, and more frequent opportunities for children's and documentary films.

PREPARING THE MS.

1. A title page is essential. This should be made out in the same way as when sending a story or article to an editor, except that it is not necessary to mention the number of words.
2. A list of characters should be given. Some writers include short character sketches and mention the type of player (e.g. "an Aubrey Smith type") or the particular player they have in mind (do not do this unless you know that the cast you suggest is at least feasible and not a rank impossibility for the company to whom the MS. is submitted). Other writers simply give the names of the characters and a two- to five-word note about each.
3. If you have written your story out to more than about 5000 words, it is not a bad idea to preface it with a shorter version—provided you can write such a version in a manner calculated to interest and arouse curiosity.
4. It is essential to have the MS. typed. Double-spacing is to be recommended, with a wide margin on the left-hand side. Quarto-size paper is probably the most convenient size.
5. It is advisable to bind the MS. in some form of simple cardboard cover.

SUBMISSION

It is obviously useless to submit your story to one of the companies who refuse to read stories unless they are sent in through a recognised literary agent. It is advisable therefore, to find out which these companies are before sending it in.

When submitting a film story direct to a film company it is usual to address the envelope to "The Scenario Editor." There is no necessity to write a covering letter. An adequately stamped return envelope must of course be enclosed. If you do write a covering letter, make it as brief as possible. If you think the story might be suitable for one or more of the company's long-contract artists, that is worth mentioning. Remember that the scenario editor and his assistants are busy men and completely indifferent either to your private problems or personal achievements. If your story involves detailed knowledge about a subject upon which you are specially qualified to write, a brief reference to the fact that you have lived for ten years with Bedouin Arabs or in a steel works, or whatever it is, might be advisable.

BROADCASTING

B.B.C. REQUIREMENTS

Talks.—The BBC welcomes manuscripts either from experts or from people with a personal experience to describe: suggestions for single talks are more acceptable than for series. Manuscripts should be written to be read aloud, and timed for 5, 10 or 15 minutes. Talks are normally read at the microphone by their authors, and writers submitting manuscripts may be asked before final acceptance to attend an audition, either in London or in one of the Regional studios. Short stories specially written for broadcasting will also be considered.

All typewritten manuscripts should be addressed to the Head of Talk's Department, BBC, Broadcasting House, London W.1.

Plays.—Nearly a thousand plays are broadcast in the course of a year. Many of these are well-known stage plays, but many are written in the first place as radio plays, and by new writers. There is a perpetual demand for new writers who are prepared to take the trouble to learn the technique with the help of certain members of the Drama Department who set aside time for this purpose.

Plays of all kinds are wanted, "straight" drama, fantasy, comedy, farce, thrillers, and so on. There is also a wide field for competent adaptations of short stories and novels. In order to save time and work it is wise, before starting to write a radio play, to find out from the BBC Drama Department if a play on that particular theme would be acceptable. If the theme is acceptable, then a short synopsis of a few lines, accompanied by two or three pages of dialogue, would enable the BBC to judge whether it would be worth while to encourage the writer to go ahead.

Notes on Radio Drama, including a model synopsis, will be sent on application. Manuscripts must be clearly typed.

If the writer lacks original ideas, but thinks that he has a sense of drama and can write good dialogue, the field of adaptation may be open to him, but, here again, he should not embark upon any work (except for his own satisfaction and practice) until he has assured himself by consulting the BBC that the novel or short story which he proposes to adapt is one which would be acceptable, and has not already been done. It is also possible that the original author may not consent, and this, too, has to be found out by the BBC.

All first communications should be addressed to the Play Librarian, Broadcasting House, London W.1, or to the Drama Producer in any of the Regional Studios.

Music.—The music policy of the BBC, dedicated to the encouragement of the best music old and new, continues to enlarge its range. Auditions for professional soloists and ensembles have been resumed on an active scale with an outside professional assessor on the listening panel.

A Music Panel of distinguished musicians meets regularly to consider the suitability for performance of the large number of MSS. constantly submitted. The BBC also commissions from British composers works of all kinds ranging from opera to music for features or for special occasions.

Variety.—New ideas for Variety programmes are constantly sought. Careful consideration is given to all scripts submitted by a panel consisting of the Head of Variety, the Assistant Head, and senior producers. The chief requirement is originality; the vast majority of scripts sent in are merely variations of existing programmes. In general it is inadvisable to write scripts for a particular star artist unless the writer has a really intimate knowledge of the artist's work. Scripts are required for all lengths of programme ranging from 10 minutes to one hour. Fees are a matter for negotiation with the Corporation's Copyright Department. Type-written scripts should be addressed to the Script Editor, Aeolian Hall, New Bond Street, London W.1.

Children's Hour.—Here again there are numerous opportunities for original material—tales, talks, plays, and dialogue stories. Stories for younger children should be approximately 800–1000 words, and for older children 1500–2000 words. Radio plays should be timed, including musical interludes, to last, approximately, 45 or 50 minutes. Shorter plays, for younger listeners can be timed to run 30 minutes, and the same length for Dialogue Stories. General matter should be sent to the Head of Children's Hour, Broadcasting House, London W.1, but authors should submit all manuscripts having local interest to BBC Regional offices. All manuscripts must be typewritten. It is suggested that potential authors should study the market by listening regularly to main Children's Hour radio productions, thereby acquiring the right technique. The standard of material is of high quality.

BROADCASTING RIGHTS AND TERMS

Terms for the broadcasting of stage plays and various types of published literary material are governed by the Standard Terms Agreement between the B.B.C. and the Publishers' Association. These may be summarised as follows:

Dramatic and prose works: For a broadcast up to 10 minutes, £1 per minute. Thereafter 15/- per minute up to 90 minutes.

Poems: For a broadcast up to 8 lines—1½ gns.; 9 to 16 lines—3 gns.; 17 to 24 lines—4 gns. Thereafter 1 gn. per 12 lines up to 144 lines, and 10/6d. per 12 lines after 144 lines.

Prose works required for adaptation into dramatic form: For a broadcast up to 20 minutes—15/- per minute. Thereafter 12/- per minute.

The above rates apply to one performance given in the B.B.C.'s Service for the United Kingdom (except where the material is used in the Television Service only, when $\frac{1}{4}$ of the above rates are paid). In the case of the Overseas Service in English $\frac{2}{3}$ of the above rates are paid for one broadcast, or the full rate for more than one but not more than seven broadcasts. For a broadcast in the Overseas Service in a foreign language $\frac{1}{3}$ of the above rates are paid, with some small increase for very short broadcasts.

For material specially written for broadcasting all relevant factors, such as the type of material, its length, and the status of the author, are taken into account when assessing fees.

Payment for specially written stories and plays, whether commissioned or submitted to the BBC, is made on acceptance of the material. In the case of music commissioned by the BBC the original score is now returned to the composer at his request and not as in the past automatically retained by the BBC.

BROADCAST TALKS

Details of the agreement which the BBC require to be signed before a talk is broadcast are given below:

Firstly the BBC give the title of the talk, the date and the time it is to be given, the length, the place it is to be broadcast from and in which Service, and the fee the Corporation is prepared to pay.

Then follow the general conditions governing the preparation of the manuscript and the broadcasting of the talk:

(1) The offer may be cancelled if a signed acceptance is not received within five days of the offer, and the Corporation considers that cancellation is necessary on account of planning requirements.

(2) The contract is subject to the final manuscript conforming with the Corporation's requirements as indicated and being in the hands of the Corporation not less than ten days before the date of the broadcast. Such manuscripts shall be retained by the Corporation unless specifically reserved by the broadcaster.

(3) The broadcaster agrees to attend such rehearsals as are in the opinion of the Corporation necessary for the broadcasting of the talk.

(4) The broadcaster agrees that (i) the talk shall be his original work and that he holds all licences or permissions necessary to authorise the use of such original work for all the purposes of this contract; (ii) the talk shall not contain any previously published material written by the broadcaster which the Corporation has not accepted in writing; (iii) if the talk contains any copyright material which the broadcaster has not written the fact will be disclosed so that the Corporation may make any necessary arrangements for its use for the purposes of this contract; (iv) the talk shall not contain anything defamatory or anything calculated to bring the Corporation into disrepute; (v) the talk as broadcast shall conform with the manuscript accepted by the Corporation.

(5) The Corporation shall be entitled without further payment (i) to make records of the talk(s) and of translations thereof for its private purposes; (ii) to broadcast extracts from the talk(s) or from records thereof in programmes of an historic or reminiscent nature and in trailer programmes; (iii) to broadcast the records once only in substitution for an actual broadcast performance; (iv) to translate the talk(s) into any language.

(6) The talk(s) or records or translations thereof may be re-broadcast in the Corporation's Services for the United Kingdom on payment in respect of each rebroadcast of a fee equal to threequarters of the original fee irrespective of the Service in which the original broadcast was given.

(7) The talk(s) or records or translations thereof may be rebroadcast in the Corporation's Overseas Services on the following terms:

(i) if the original broadcast was given in the Overseas Services

- (a) as required during a period of 14 days from the date of the original broadcast without further payment;
- (b) thereafter as required on payment of one fee equal to one half of the original fee;

(ii) if the original broadcast was given in the Services for the United Kingdom

- (a) as required during a period of 14 days from the first broadcast in the Overseas Services on payment of one fee equal to one half of the original fee;
- (b) thereafter as required on payment of one fee equal to one half of the original fee.

(8) The Corporation shall have the exclusive right for 28 days from the date of the first broadcast to publish the talk(s) or any translation thereof in its journals excluding the Radio Times. If the talk(s) is published in full in The Listener, London Calling, or the BBC Quarterly the Corporation will pay a fee equal to 50 per cent of the original broadcasting fee in respect of each publication. If only excerpts or abridgments are published in these journals a proportionately smaller fee to be assessed by the Corporation will be paid but the fee shall not be less than 10/6. Abridgments or excerpts will be so described unless the broadcaster agrees on request that such a description may be omitted.

(9) The Corporation shall have the right at any time to cancel the talk (i) in the event of the broadcast being prevented by force majeure, or by any cause whatsoever beyond the reasonable control of the Corporation, subject to payment of a fair proportion of the fee assessed by the Corporation after discussion with the broadcaster, for work already carried out; (ii) for any other reasons subject to payment of the full fee under this contract or to the offer of an alternative date for the broadcast as the Corporation shall decide.

(10) In the event of the broadcaster being unable to broadcast the talk on account of illness, physical incapacity, or any other unavoidable cause, the Corporation may use the talk for all the purposes of this contract subject to payment of a proportion of the fee assessed by the Corporation after discussion with the broadcaster, but such proportion shall not be less than 50 per cent.

Letters addressed to speakers c/o the BBC will be forwarded, but for statistical purposes the letters may be opened before being forwarded unless the BBC are notified of any objection. Letters marked "Personal" are forwarded unopened.

AUSTRALIAN BROADCASTING COMMISSION REQUIREMENTS

THE Australian Broadcasting Commission controls, under the authority of the Government of Australia, the national broadcasting system of that country. Its activities cover Australia by a network of 4500 miles of communications radiating from the capital cities of the six States, and its programmes, designed to meet the need of many types of listener, are especially concerned with broadcasting as a cultural influence. Accordingly, the Commission needs literary material, much of it similar to that used by the BBC but with the essential difference that the public to be catered for is the Australian public, a public, that is to say, with its own environment, needs, outlook, ideas, opinions, and tastes.

Plays.—Many plays broadcast by the BBC are used by the ABC. But apart from these, many other plays are required. Most types of play are in regular production—the classic drama of the greatest writers, every variety of modern drama and comedy, radio plays, stage plays adapted for radio, adaptations of stories, etc. The average length of plays is from fifty minutes to one hour.

Light Entertainment.—Variety material, scripts of topical or of fanciful humour, scripts of light-entertainment plays with music, and so forth, may be submitted.

Short Stories.—Occasional openings for short stories of 1200 to 1500 words.

Children's Sessions.—Plays, talks, stories, serials may be submitted. Length: stories 800–1000 words; plays not more than 15 minutes.

Talks.—Most talks are commissioned or are recorded talks from the BBC programmes. Outstanding material, however, may be submitted. Scripts should be of from 8½ to 13½ minutes' length.

(Matter coming under any of these headings may be addressed to the Overseas Representative, Australian Broadcasting Commission, Australia House, Strand, London, W.C.2, who will also be glad to give any further information required.)

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION REQUIREMENTS

THE Drama Department is interested particularly in radio plays designed for the half-hour broadcasting period. Since various regularly scheduled drama periods are broadcast in various parts of Canada, plays of all possible types are required. The Drama Department does not buy scripts outright but pays for them on a royalty basis, the rights being secured merely for a single half-hour broadcast. The minimum fee for a half-hour performance is $50.00. Fees up to $100.00 for single broadcast rights are paid, depending upon the scope and importance of the period for which the play is being scheduled. Plays designed for periods of more or less than the half-hour are not generally required and should be subject to enquiry before being submitted.

All writing for feature broadcasts is done on specific assignment.

Talks and Public Affairs provide a wide scope for the talents of both professional and amateur speakers and writers. Roughly, the Talks Department wants material of two types: firstly, individual talks or series by people who are experts in various fields, and secondly, reporters or commentators or interviewers who have a knowledge of radio technique, acceptable voices and an ability to write for radio. The Department pays fees ranging from $10.00 for 5-minute reports to $50.00 for a broadcast by a highly trained commentator or distinguished speaker. All talks are copyrighted by the CBC for a period of three months following the date of broadcast, after which the copyright reverts to the speaker. In this interim period application for permission to reprint talks must be made to the CBC, although such permission is usually gladly given. Most talks are 15 minutes in length, although there are exceptions—notably the 11-minute talk and 5-minute reports for inclusion in quarter-hour periods. The Talks Department also is continually searching for speakers who might be acceptable for discussion broadcasts and also for skilled writers who can dramatise information for radio. This latter example is one of the instances in which the Talks Department would accept a script if the author was unable to broadcast himself.

Broadcasting in Canada differs from broadcasting in England in that the Corporation operates five different networks, one in each of the five time-zones. These five networks combine to make what are called the Trans-Canada and Dominion networks (two separate cross-country networks are operated, with different service on each) when added together. But because of the various times across Canada, each of the five regional networks operates independently for the benefit of their respective listeners, programmes such as news, school broadcasts, and other public service presentations being scheduled on these networks at times best suited to the listening habits of the audiences concerned. In most other cases these five networks are amalgamated into either the Trans-Canada or Dominion network and so present the broadcasts to the country as a whole.

Enquiries concerning programmes and programme material should be addressed to the Programme Division, Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, 354 Jarvis Street, Toronto, Canada.

MARKETS FOR ARTISTS, DESIGNERS, ETC.

MOST of the advice given to writers on page 258 applies equally to artists, illustrators and designers. Most book publishers are glad to see artists' work, either by post or appointment, and maintain a file of artists whose work they hope to use when suitable opportunities occur. It is not always easy to secure appointments with editors of journals and magazines, and it is often more advantageous to send a small selection of work by registered post (enclosing stamps for return). It is, however, a waste of time to submit, shall we say, illustrations for boys' adventure stories to Messrs. Batsford: markets must be studied carefully.

The attention of artists is called to the articles of special interest to them on pages 320-324.

MARKETS FOR PHOTOGRAPHERS

Book publishers, especially those issuing technical books and school books, will be glad to know the range of subjects covered by a photographer.

PHOTOGRAPHIC AGENCIES

THEIR USE AND ABUSE

By ALEC DAVIS

PHOTOGRAPHIC agencies can be useful to the photographer who wants to get his work into the newspapers. Their methods of working can be understood by comparison with news agencies rather than literary agencies; they look for news value rather than style or technical perfection, and they do not make the placing of free-lances' work their sole occupation. Rather—in most cases—they look upon the unattached photographer as somebody who can supplement the activities of their staff men.

With news pictures to appear in that night's or next morning's national papers, there must be no delay. You cannot send them round from paper to paper seeking the highest bidder. If you send them to one paper and state that they are Exclusive, you may be paid more than if they were not. But it will probably pay you better still to sell them to seven or eight different papers. This is where the agencies help. It is generally worth your while to allow them to take the forty or fifty per cent commission they require, for a good agency can multiply your sales manifold.

If your pictures are really "hot" news, waste no time in developing, but (from the provinces) send undeveloped negatives by passenger train from your nearest railway station to the London terminus, addressed to the agency and marked "to be called for." Include with the negatives your name and address and description of what the pictures represent. If you have to write this by hand, write proper names in CAPITAL LETTERS. Having put your packet on the train, telephone or send a telegram to the agency to which it is despatched, stating station and time of arrival in London. Less urgent negatives can go by express post.

If you have taken your pictures in London, you can take them yourself, or send them by messenger.

A few exceptionally good "feature" pictures are accepted by agencies from free-lances, but it must be remembered they are not likely to be used by as many papers as newspictures (it would look rather silly if all the dailies came out the same morning with the same picture of, say, Highland sheep), so you may do better by submitting direct to one or two likely editors and saving agency commission. When you know the best market for your picture, send it straight there; do not bother an agency with it, but save time and commission.

COPYRIGHT*

By F. E. SKONE JAMES, B.A., B.C.L., Barrister-at-Law.

NATURE OF COPYRIGHT

Copyright protection is not given to ideas or systems, plots or themes, however original; it is aimed solely to prevent the copying of literary, musical, dramatic or artistic works. The idea, theme or plot must therefore be reduced into concrete form before protection can be claimed and then the protection given is to the form and not to the idea. If the idea is reproduced in a quite different form, this is not an infringement of copyright.

Another basic principle of copyright law is that it does not give a monopoly even to the form selected, since it is directed to preventing copying and not to giving an absolute title to any particular form of words or of artistic production. Copyright protection is given to dictionaries and directories and to photographs, but this does not mean that another may not lawfully produce, independently, an almost identical work; he is only guilty of infringement, if he copies the earlier work.

A further important matter in regard to copyright protection is that (in the British Empire and most European countries at least. See post "works protected abroad") no formalities are required. Copyright protection is afforded as soon as the page of manuscript is written, the sketch is drawn, or the melody is composed. The work does not need to be printed or published, no form of registration is needed, no "copyright reserved" notice is required. Publishers are required to deliver certain copies of published books to libraries (Section 15) but failure to do this does not affect the copyright, though it may give rise to liability for penalties (sub-section (6)).

KIND OF WORKS PROTECTED

Literary, dramatic, and artistic works are defined in the Act (Section 35 (1)) see also definitions of "work of sculpture," "architectural work of art," "engravings" and "photograph."

It has been decided that the expression "literary" does not involve any qualification of style but covers any work expressed in print or writing, so long as it is substantial enough to involve some literary skill and labour of composition. And a similarly slight degree of skill and labour is imposed in regard to other classes of works.

Thus selections of poems, abridgements, notes to school textbooks, arrangements of music and other compilations are protected, provided that it is established that the production has involved a certain amount of intellectual endeavour and is not merely mechanical.

Artistic works intended for use as industrial designs are however not protected under the Act (Section 22). Such works can be protected under the Patents and Designs Acts 1907-1931, but in that case certain formalities of registration are required and a Patent Agent should be consulted.

* It is not possible in a short article such as this must be to examine the Law of Copyright in detail. The general principles are explained and attention is drawn to many points of special interest. Extracts from the Copyright Act, 1911 are given on page 285. Expert legal advice should be sought in case of practical difficulty.

TITLES AND PSEUDONYMS

The title of a book or story is normally not protected under the Copyright Act since it is too short to be treated as a literary work. If however a title is taken and used in such a way as to cause confusion, a "passing off" action can often be brought successfully.

A similar ground of action arises if an author's pseudonym is used by another in such a way as to cause the public to believe that the second work is by the first author. Apart from agreement, if an author has been writing for a periodical under a particular pen-name and ceases to contribute, he is entitled to use the pen-name elsewhere and the periodical is not entitled to continue to use it.

TO WHOM COPYRIGHT PROTECTION IS GIVEN

In general the person to be protected is the author. This means the person who has actually written the book or drawn the picture; a person who has merely suggested a theme or supplied information is not an author; this follows from the general principle stated above that protection is given to form and not ideas; it is the author of the form with whom copyright law is concerned.

In the case of photographs and portraits and engravings and similar works a different rule applies (Section 5(1) (a)) and, if the original is ordered and paid for, the copyright vests in the client and not in the artist or photographer.

Where a work is made by an employee in the course of his employment the copyright vests in the employer (Section 1 1(b)). This however only applies in the case of a strict contract of service; where the author or artist is merely employed to provide a certain work and is not a servant, liable to detailed control as to the manner of production, the copyright vests in him and not the employer. And, even in the case of a full time employee, work done for the employer out of hours will remain the copyright of the servant.

JOINT AUTHORS

Joint authorship involves that two or more persons must have collaborated to produce a single work. Each must have taken some part in producing jointly the work protected; as has been seen, a man, who merely suggests the idea or theme, is not an author at all. Again, if the parts produced by each are easily separable, it is not a case of joint authorship but each owns a separate copyright in each part (Section 16). In the case of a work of joint authorship, neither can deal with the copyright without the consent of the other or others but, on the other hand, each can bring actions against the other or third parties for any infringement. Other matters of importance to joint authors are referred to under "Duration of copyright protection."

ASSIGNMENT OF COPYRIGHT

An assignment of copyright must be in writing and signed by the author or his agent (Section 5 (2)), but no other formality is required. Copyright may be assigned for certain areas, or for a certain period, or parts of the right may be assigned i.e. the right to perform, mechanical rights, printing and publishing rights. On the other hand it is not possible to assign the right to print in one particular form or for one particular purpose e.g. serial rights, book rights, etc. since separate rights of this nature are not conferred by the Act; such rights can only be granted by way of licence. The copyright in a work not yet written cannot be completely assigned but substantially the same result will be obtained by an agreement for its assignment when created.

LICENCES

A licence to print, publish or perform or to exercise other rights conferred by the Act does not require to be in writing and may be implied from conduct. The principal distinction between the position of an assignee and a licensee is that the former can, but the latter cannot, sue third parties for the infringement of the right.

Other distinctions are referred to under "Publishing Agreements." A licence may be expressed to be "sole and exclusive" in which event the grantor of the licence will be liable, if he grants a second licence; though the first licensee will in general have no right of action against the second.

WHAT CONSTITUTES INFRINGEMENT

Copyright is infringed by the reproduction or colourable imitation of any substantial part of a copyright work. Such infringements are proved by a detailed comparison of similarities and proof is often difficult in the case of compilations which, of necessity, resemble one another; in such cases copying may be proved from the coincidence of trifling errors. In considering whether the part taken is substantial more regard is had to the importance than to the quantity of what is taken; thus to take a few bars of the essential melody of a tune may constitute an infringement. An infringement is committed whether the copying has been directly from the original or through an intervening copy.

Other modes of infringement are to publish an unpublished work, to make a translation, to dramatise a book and to make a novel of a play. (See also performance, films, records, broadcasting and television infra.)

In addition to the direct infringements above described, an actionable wrong is committed by anyone who knowingly sells, exhibits in public, distributes or imports copies unlawfully made (Section 2(2)). It is to be noted that in these cases proof of knowledge is essential and, in practice, it may be difficult to establish these offences except by giving express notice and taking action if the offence is continued.

PERFORMANCE IN PUBLIC

It is an infringement to perform any substantial part of a copyright work in public and to permit any theatre or place of entertainment to be used for private profit for such a performance. A performance is in public unless it is purely private and domestic. It is not necessary that every member of the public shall have access or that a charge shall be made for admission. Performances at clubs or institutes with limited membership are therefore generally in public for this purpose.

EXCEPTIONS TO LIABILITY FOR INFRINGEMENT

It cannot of course be an infringement if the consent of the owner of the copyright has been given or is to be implied. Where however a consent has been given without payment, such consent may be withdrawn at any time.

A work may be reproduced for purposes of private study, criticism, review or newspaper summary provided the use is fair (Section 2 (1) (i)). The test of fairness is whether the purpose of the use made is reasonable in the interests of criticism, etc. or whether what is produced is in substance a competing publication.

There are also special exceptions in the case of the use by an artist of his studies (Section 2 (1) (ii)), the copying of works exhibited in public (Section 2 (1) (iii)), school books (Section 2 (1) (iv)), newspaper reports of lectures (Section 2 (1) (v)), public readings (Section 2 (1) (vi)), reports of political speeches (Section 20).

Again, a published work may be republished by anyone at a certain period after the death of the author on payment of a specified royalty (Section 3. Proviso).

And Government publications may in general be freely reproduced unless they bear thereon a "copyright reserved" notice.

It should be observed however that ignorance is no defence, even if reasonable in the circumstances; printers run considerable risks in this connection since they have often no means of knowing that an infringement is being committed but they are nevertheless liable.

WHO IS LIABLE FOR INFRINGEMENT

In the case of an infringement by the publication of a copy or imitation, the author, publisher and printer of the infringing work are equally liable.

Where an infringement is committed by performance in public, not only the actual performers but the firm or company by whom they are employed are liable.

Greater difficulty arises in the determination of the liability of hirers of films, owners of halls and other persons who have not infringed either personally or by their actual servants. It is an infringement however to "authorise" any infringing act so that, if it proved that any person by supplying the material, or otherwise made the infringement possible, he will generally be held liable.

THE REMEDIES FOR INFRINGEMENT

A copyright owner, whose right is infringed, is, in general, entitled as of right to an injunction i.e. an order of the Court restraining the defendant from repeating the infringement, and can insist on such an order although offered a personal undertaking first. It is to be noted however that such an order will be directed only to repetition of the actual infringement; i.e. an order cannot be obtained to restrain copying of future parts of a serial story because earlier parts have been copied.

A second remedy is damages for infringement. These are usually based upon evidence of loss suffered by the defendant, i.e. that if the infringing book had not been published, he would have been able to publish more copies of his own book or that he otherwise has lost a market for his material. Damages for infringement may however be penal in the case of a deliberate infringement and proof of actual loss is not essential. It is permissible, in assessing damages, to have regard to the sort of fee which would have been asked, if a licence had been requested.

Damages however can alternatively be based upon a claim for conversion, upon the principle that infringing material is deemed the property of the copyright owner. Under this head regard is had not to the loss to the copyright owner but to the value of the infringing work. Where only a portion of the work containing the infringement represents infringing material it is necessary first to assess the value of the infringing work as a whole, by reference to the sale price of each copy multiplied by the number of copies, and then to assess the damages at that fraction of this figure which the infringing material bears to the whole. Where the portion of the whole which is infringing is relatively slight, e.g. in the case of an infringing article in a newspaper, this calculation is difficult.

A further alternative remedy is an account of profits. Here the claim is based not upon the value of the infringing material but upon the amount of profit made by the defendant in respect of the infringement.

In addition to the foregoing remedies a successful Plaintiff is entitled to have delivered up to him all infringing material in the Defendant's possession.

The special period limiting the time during which a copyright action may be brought should be noted (Section 10); this period of three years is equally applicable to a claim for damages for conversion.

There are further restrictions on the remedies obtainable in the case of an innocent infringer (Section 8) and in relation to architecture (Section 9). The former restriction is rarely of assistance to defendants since what has to be established is not innocence of intention to infringe but ignorance that the work reproduced enjoyed copyright protection. In view of the fact that every work enjoys copyright without formality this defence is difficult to establish, except in special circumstances where it might be reasonably thought that the work was out of copyright or not protected in this country.

OTHER REMEDIES

In addition to the remedies above mentioned, which are enforced by civil action, there are certain special forms of procedure open to persons whose rights are infringed.

Certain infringements of copyright constitute a criminal offence rendering the offender liable to fines or imprisonment (Section 11). It should be noted however that proof of knowledge that an infringement is being committed is essential in all these cases.

Two older acts (the Musical (Summary Proceedings) Copyright Act 1902 and the Musical Copyright Act 1906) give rights to seize pirated copies of musical works put on sale in a public and create offences punishable by fine or imprisonment for hawking and selling such copies.

By Section 7 of the Fine Arts Copyright Act 1862 it is an offence (a) fraudulently to affix upon an artistic work any name, initials or monogram (b) fraudulently to sell an artistic work having thereon the name initials or monogram of a person who did not make the work (c) fraudulently to dispose of any copy or imitation of an artistic work as having been made by the author of the original work and (d) to sell or publish any artistic work with alterations as the unaltered work of the artist. The last mentioned offence can also be the subject of a claim for an injunction.

Provision is also made (Section 14) for the detention by the Customs Authorities of infringing copies of copyright works made abroad and script to be imported into the United Kingdom.

THE DURATION OF COPYRIGHT PROTECTION

The normal period of copyright protection is during the life of the author and fifty years after his death (Section 3). In the case of a work of joint authorship the protection extends during the life of the author who dies last or for fifty years after the death of the author who dies first (whichever is the longer) Section 16 (1). In the case of a work which has not been published or, if a dramatic or musical work, has not been published or performed during the life of the author, copyright subsists until publication, or performance and for fifty years thereafter (Section 17). The copyright in records and photographs is fifty years from the making of the work (Sections 19 and 21), and in Government publications is fifty years from publication (Section 18).

In the case of works which were in existence before the commencement of the Act of 1911 (the 1st July 1912), the terms of copyright above described apply if the work enjoyed copyright at such date (Section 24). This involves an examination of the terms of copyright subsisting under the various Acts in force before 1912. In general protection under these Acts was the life of the author and seven years or forty two years from publication, (whichever was the longer) but different terms of copyright were given by the various Acts dealing with artistic works.

Where the copyright in a pre-Act work had been assigned before 1912, such copyright reverts in the author or his assigns at the expiration of the old term of copyright applicable to the work but subject to various options in favour of the assignee (Section 24 provisos).

FILMS

The making of a film involves the creation of an artistic work, i.e. a series of photographs and, unless it is merely a record of passing events, the creation of a dramatic work (see definition of dramatic work in Section 35 (1)). The first owner of the artistic copyright is the owner of the negative at the time it is made (Section 21), whereas the first owner of the dramatic work may be difficult to determine. (See to whom protection given, above.) In fact a commercial film usually involves the exercise of a number of separate copyrights since, at each stage of its inception, a separate copyright work may be produced, e.g. story, screen dialogue, and the film as finally cut, and the ownership of copyright will depend upon the agreements of the various parties concerned with the film company.

It is an infringement of the copyright in a novel or story to convert it into a film whether the actual language of the literary work is taken or not. But something more than a mere plot or idea must be taken; it must be proved that the film adopts a substantial part of the incidents used in the story to work out the plot.

There is no copyright in a scene in actual life, e.g. sporting events, so that the organiser has no remedy in the case of the filming of such events provided that the film can be taken without trespass. And the passer by cannot complain if he is filmed in the street.

GRAMOPHONE RECORDS

A copyright work is infringed if any record or contrivance is made whereby it can be mechanically reproduced (Section 1 (2) (d)); this would include the making of ordinary gramophone records, musical box and pianola records and all forms of electrical recording, including sound films. The mechanical right in musical works is thus a valuable right and is quite distinct from the publishing right in the printed music and the performing right.

There are however a complicated series of provisions (Section 19) under which, when a musical work has been once recorded with the consent of the copyright owner, it can be recorded thereafter by anyone else on payment of a fixed royalty, the payment whereof is in general secured by the issue of adhesive stamps to be attached to the record. The normal royalty is 6½ per cent of the ordinary retail selling price of the record with a minimum of three farthings for each work reproduced on a single record.

A separate copyright subsists in recorded music and, if a gramophone record is performed in public, a licence to perform is required from the gramophone company as well as from the owner of the copyright in the music itself.

BROADCASTING AND TELEVISION

Broadcasting involves an exercise of the right to perform a work in public. If music or drama are recorded, this also involves an exercise of the mechanical right, since the record is a contrivance whereby such works can be mechanically performed (Section 1 (2) (d)).

If broadcast performances are played from a loud speaker in a public place, this involves a separate public performance not covered by any licence to perform given to the BBC.

Television involves an exercise of similar rights to those involved in ordinary broadcasting. Both may involve an exercise of the right to dramatise a novel or literary work by means of a performance (Section 1 (2) (c)).

PUBLISHING AGREEMENTS

The simplest form of publishing agreement is a mere licence to publish in a newspaper or periodical for a single payment. The terms of such agreements usually depend upon implication or trade custom. It is generally understood that unsigned articles may be altered but that signed articles may not be altered without the author's permission. Where an article is sent to a periodical without covering letter, there will be implied, on the one hand, a licence to publish and, on the other, an agreement to pay such remuneration as is normal and reasonable. If the article is kept and the author is sent a proof for revision, the author is entitled to a fee even if the work is not actually published.

Where a work is to be published on royalty terms it is important from the point of view of the author that he does not assign his copyright but only grants a licence. If he assigns, he will not be able to prevent the publisher from selling the rights in the work, he cannot complain of alterations made by the publisher short of such alterations as would be legally defamatory of the author, and he may be seriously prejudiced if the publisher gets into financial difficulties. Some protection is given to authors under Section 60 of the Bankruptcy Act 1914 but this is not available where the publisher is a limited company. A licence however is generally personal to the publisher, even if this is not expressly stated, and provision can be made to protect the author from alterations and in the case of insolvency of the publisher.

It is often difficult to determine whether the words used involve an assignment or a licence and this should be clearly expressed.

A publishing agreement, in the interests of the author, should require publication within some fixed time, should deal with the style and price of publication, the method of advertising, the number of free copies allowed and provide for proper accounts.

Publishing agreements often provide options to the Publisher to acquire other rights in the work such as translation rights, the right to dramatise, film rights and rights to publish abroad or in the Dominions. From the author's point of view it is usually preferable that such rights shall be granted on royalty terms rather than for a single payment. The Publisher may also take an option on subsequent works of the author; such an option is enforceable by injunction to restrain the author from publishing elsewhere.

Apart from express agreement a publisher is entitled to dispose of stock in hand after the licence is determined since such stock, having been lawfully made, does not constitute infringing copies.

WORKS ORIGINATING ABROAD

The Act of 1911 extends to works first published within the British Empire and to unpublished works of authors who are Empire nationals or were resident within the British Empire when the work was made. A work is deemed first published within the Empire if published there before or within fourteen days after first publication elsewhere (Section 35 (3)) and a work is published if copies are issued to the public in such quantities as are reasonably necessary to meet the public demand. Copyright throughout the British Empire is also extended to works first published in countries of the Copyright Union and unpublished works of authors who are nationals of or resident at the time of the making of the work in such countries. The countries of the Copyright Union include all European countries except the U.S.S.R., Japan, Siam, Brazil and the French, Dutch, Spanish and Portugese colonies and protectorates.

Published works originating in the U.S.A. are not protected in the British Empire unless published within fourteen days after the U.S.A. publication. There is however a special war provision under which works first published in the U.S.A. after September 3, 1939, obtain protection in Great Britain if published here before the expiration of a year from the official termination of the war as from the date of such publication. The date of termination of the war for the purposes of this provision has not yet (September 1946) been fixed. Unpublished works of citizens of a residence in the U.S.A. are however protected in Great Britain until publication, and it is to be observed that publication does not include public performance (Section 1 (3)) so that U.S.A. plays and films, which have not been published in the sense of issue of copies, enjoy protection here as unpublished works.

HOW FAR BRITISH WORKS ARE PROTECTED ABROAD

Works first published in the British Empire and unpublished works of British subjects are protected in all Convention countries (see above) though it should be noted that "first publication" in this case has not necessarily quite the same meaning in all countries. Some countries, e.g. the Netherlands, do not accept the mere issue of copies as constituting publication in a country and require that copies shall be issued from a distributing centre in the nature of a publishing house in the Country, and the fourteen days period is not universal.

As regards other foreign countries, copyright can only be secured by complying with the formalities prescribed by the law of the Country. In the U.S.A. copyright is secured by registration and deposit of copies. Copyright cannot be acquired unless a "copyright reserved" notice is affixed to all copies sold whether in the U.S.A. or abroad. Application for registration must be made promptly or the right to protection is lost but an interim protection can be obtained which enables the position to be preserved pending publication in the U.S.A. Furthermore war legislation has increased the period of delay allowed for registration. Books or periodicals in the English language however cannot secure permanent protection in the U.S.A. unless an edition is printed in the U.S.A. from type set up there.

In most South American countries, except Brazil (see above) copyright can only be secured by some form of local registration.

THE COPYRIGHT ACT*

IMPERIAL COPYRIGHT

1.—(1) Subject to the provisions of this Act, copyright shall subsist throughout the parts of His Majesty's dominions to which this Act extends for the term hereinafter mentioned in every original literary dramatic musical and artistic work, if—

- (a) in the case of a published work, the work was first published within such parts of His Majesty's dominions as aforesaid; and
- (b) in the case of an unpublished work, the author was at the date of the making of the work a British subject or resident within such parts of His Majesty's dominions as aforesaid;

but in no other works, except so far as the protection conferred by this Act is extended by Orders in Council thereunder relating to self-governing dominions to which this Act does not extend and to foreign countries.

(2) For the purposes of this Act, "copyright" means the sole right to produce or reproduce the work or any substantial part thereof in any material form whatsoever, to perform, or in the case of a lecture to deliver, the work or any substantial part thereof in public; if the work is unpublished, to publish the work or any substantial part thereof; and shall include the sole right,—

- (a) to produce, reproduce, perform, or publish any translation of the work;
- (b) in the case of a dramatic work, to convert it into a novel or other non-dramatic work;
- (c) in the case of a novel or other non-dramatic work, or of an artistic work, to convert it into a dramatic work, by way of performance in public or otherwise;
- (d) in the case of a literary, dramatic, or musical work, to make any record, perforated roll, cinematograph film, or other contrivance by means of which the work may be mechanically performed or delivered, and to authorise any such acts as aforesaid.

(3) For the purposes of this Act, publication, in relation to any work, means the issue of copies of the work to the public, and does not include the performance in public of a dramatic or musical work, the delivery in public of a lecture, the exhibition in public of an artistic work, or the construction of an architectural work of art, but, for the purposes of this provision, the issue of photographs and engravings of works of sculpture and architectural works of art shall not be deemed to be publication of such works.

INFRINGEMENT OF COPYRIGHT

2.—(1) Copyright in a work shall be deemed to be infringed by any person who, without the consent of the owner of the copyright, does anything the sole right to do which is by this Act conferred on the owner of the copyright: Provided that the following acts shall not constitute an infringement of copyright:—

- (i) Any fair dealing with any work for the purposes of private study, research criticism, review, or newspaper summary;
- (ii) Where the author of an artistic work is not the owner of the copyright therein, the use by the author of any mould, cast, sketch, plan, model, or study made by him for the purpose of the work, provided that he does not thereby repeat or imitate the main design of that work;
- (iii) The making or publishing of paintings, drawings, engravings, or photographs of a work of sculpture or artistic craftsmanship, if permanently situate in a public place or building, or the making or publishing of paintings, drawings, engravings, or photographs (which are not in the nature of architectural drawings or plans) of any architectural work of art;

* Reproduced by permission of The Controller, H.M. Stationery Office.

- (iv) The publication in a collection, mainly composed of non-copyright matter, bonâ fide intended for the use of schools, and so described in the title and in any advertisements issued by the publisher, of short passages from published literary works not themselves published for the use of schools in which copyright subsists: Provided that not more than two of such passages from works by the same author are published by the same publisher within five years, and that the source from which such passages are taken is acknowledged:
 - (v) The publication in a newspaper of a report of a lecture delivered in public, unless the report is prohibited by conspicuous written or printed notice affixed before and maintained during the lecture at or about the main entrance of the building in which the lecture is given, and, except whilst the building is being used for public worship, in a position near the lecturer; but nothing in this paragraph shall affect the provisions in paragraph (i) as to newspaper summaries:
 - (vi) The reading or recitation in public by one person of any reasonable extract from any published work.
- (2) Copyright in a work shall also be deemed to be infringed by any person who—
- (a) sells or lets for hire, or by way of trade exposes or offers for sale or hire; or
 - (b) distributes either for the purposes of trade or to such an extent as to affect prejudicially the owner of the copyright; or
 - (c) by way of trade exhibits in public; or
 - (d) imports for sale or hire into any part of His Majesty's dominions to which this Act extends, any work which to his knowledge infringes copyright or would infringe copyright if it had been made within the part of His Majesty's dominions in or into which the sale or hiring, exposure, offering for sale or hire, distribution, exhibition, or importation took place.

(3) Copyright in a work shall also be deemed to be infringed by any person who for his private profit permits a theatre or other place of entertainment to be used for the performance in public of the work without the consent of the owner of the copyright, unless he was not aware, and had no reasonable ground for suspecting, that the performance would be an infringement of copyright.

DURATION OF COPYRIGHT

3. The term for which copyright shall subsist shall, except as otherwise expressly provided by this Act, be the life of the author and a period of fifty years after his death:

Provided that at any time after the expiration of twenty-five years, or in the case of a work in which copyright subsists at the passing of this Act thirty years, from the death of the author of a published work, copyright in the work shall not be deemed to be infringed by the reproduction of the work for sale if the person reproducing the work proves that he has given the prescribed notice in writing of his intention to reproduce the work; and that he has paid in the prescribed manner to, or for the benefit of, the owner of the copyright royalties in respect of all copies of the work sold by him calculated at the rate of ten per cent on the price at which he publishes the work; and, for the purposes of this proviso, the Board of Trade may make regulations prescribing the mode in which notices are to be given, and the particulars to be given in such notices, and the mode, time, and frequency of the payment of royalties, including (if they think fit) regulations requiring payment in advance or otherwise securing the payment of royalties.

COMPULSORY LICENCES

4. If at any time after the death of the author of a literary, dramatic, or musical work which has been published or performed in public a complaint is made to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council that the owner of the copyright in the work has refused to republish or to allow the republication of the work or has refused to allow the performance in public of the work, and that by reason of such refusal the work is withheld from the public, the owner of the copyright may be ordered to grant a licence to reproduce the work or perform the work in public, as the case may be, on such terms and subject to such conditions as the Judicial Committee may think fit.

OWNERSHIP OF COPYRIGHT, &c.

5.—(1) Subject to the provisions of this Act, the author of a work shall be the first owner of the copyright therein:

Provided that—

- (a) where, in the case of an engraving, photograph, or portrait, the plate or other original was ordered by some other person and was made for valuable consideration in pursuance of that order, then, in the absence of any agreement to the contrary, the person by whom such plate or other original was ordered shall be the first owner of the copyright; and
- (b) where the author was in the employment of some other person under a contract of service or apprenticeship and the work was made in the course of his employment by that person, the person by whom the author was employed shall, in the absence of any agreement to the contrary, be the first owner of the copyright, but where the work is an article or other contribution to a newspaper, magazine, or similar periodical, there shall, in the absence of any agreement to the contrary, be deemed to be reserved to the author a right to restrain the publication of the work, otherwise than as part of a newspaper, magazine, or similar periodical.

(2) The owner of the copyright in any work may assign the right, either wholly or partially, and either generally or subject to limitations to the United Kingdom or any self-governing dominion or other part of His Majesty's dominions to which this Act extends, and either for the whole term of the copyright or for any part thereof, and may grant any interest in the right by licence, but no such assignment or grant shall be valid unless it is in writing signed by the owner of the right in respect of which the assignment or grant is made, or by his duly authorised agent:

Provided that, where the author of a work is the first owner of the copyright therein, no assignment of the copyright, and no grant of any interest therein, made by him (otherwise than by will) after the passing of this Act, shall be operative to vest in the assignee or grantee any rights with respect to the copyright in the work beyond the expiration of twenty-five years from the death of the author, and in the reversionary interest in the copyright expectant on the termination of that period shall, on the death of the author, notwithstanding any agreement to the contrary, devolve on his legal personal representatives as part of his estate, and any agreement entered into by him as to the disposition of such reversionary interest shall be null and void, but nothing in this proviso shall be construed as applying to the assignment of the copyright in a collective work or a licence to publish a work or part of a work as part of a collective work.

(3) Where, under any partial assignment of copyright, the assignee becomes entitled to any right comprised in copyright, the assignee as respects the right so assigned, and the assignor as respects the rights not assigned, shall be treated for the purposes of this Act as the owner of the copyright, and the provisions of this Act shall have effect accordingly.

CIVIL REMEDIES FOR INFRINGEMENT

6.—(1) Where copyright in any work has been infringed, the owner of the copyright shall, except as otherwise provided by this Act, be entitled to all such remedies by way of injunction or interdict, damages, accounts, and otherwise, as are or may be conferred by law for the infringement of a right.

(2) The costs of all parties in any proceedings in respect of the infringement of copyright shall be in the absolute discretion of the court.

(3) In any action for infringement of copyright in any work, the work shall be presumed to be a work in which copyright subsists and the plaintiff shall be presumed to be the owner of the copyright, unless the defendant puts in issue the existence of the copyright, or, as the case may be, the title of the plaintiff, and where any such question is in issue, then—

- (a) if a name purporting to be that of the author of the work is printed or otherwise indicated thereon in the usual manner, the person whose name is so printed or indicated shall, unless the contrary is proved, be presumed to be the author of the work;
- (b) if no name is so printed or indicated, or if the name so printed or indicated is not the author's true name or the name by which he is commonly known, and a name purporting to be that of the publisher or proprietor of the work is printed or otherwise indicated thereon in the usual manner the person whose name is so printed or indicated shall, unless the contrary is proved, be presumed to be the owner of the copyright in the work for the purposes of proceedings in respect of the infringement of copyright therein.

RIGHTS OF OWNER AGAINST PERSONS POSSESSING OR DEALING WITH INFRINGING COPIES, &c.

7. All infringing copies of any work in which copyright subsists, or of any substantial part thereof, and all plates used or intended to be used for the production of such infringing copies, shall be deemed to be the property of the owner of the copyright, who accordingly may take proceedings for the recovery of the possession thereof or in respect of the conversion thereof.

EXEMPTION OF INNOCENT INFRINGER FROM LIABILITY TO PAY DAMAGES, &c.

8. Where proceedings are taken in respect of the infringement of the copyright in any work and the defendant in his defence alleges that he was not aware of the existence of the copyright in the work, the plaintiff shall not be entitled to any remedy other than an injunction or interdict in respect of the infringement if the defendant proves that at the date of the infringement he was not aware and had no reasonable ground for suspecting that copyright subsisted in the work.

RESTRICTION ON REMEDIES IN THE CASE OF ARCHITECTURE

9.—(1) Where the construction of a building or other structure which infringes or which, if completed, would infringe the copyright in some other work has been commenced, the owner of the copyright shall not be entitled to obtain an injunction or interdict to restrain the construction of such building or structure or to order its demolition.

(2) Such of the other provisions of this Act as provide that an infringing copy of a work shall be deemed to be the property of the owner of the copyright, or as impose summary penalties, shall not apply in any case to which this section applies.

LIMITATION OF ACTIONS

10. An action in respect of infringement of copyright shall not be commenced after the expiration of three years next after the infringement.

PENALTIES FOR DEALING WITH INFRINGING COPIES, &c.

11.—(1) If any person knowingly—

- (a) makes for sale or hire any infringing copy of a work in which copyright subsists; or
- (b) sells or lets for hire, or by way of trade exposes or offers for sale or hire any infringing copy of any such work; or
- (c) distributes infringing copies of any such work either for the purposes of trade or to such an extent as to affect prejudicially the owner of the copyright; or
- (d) by way of trade exhibits in public any infringing copy of any such work; or
- (e) imports for sale or hire into the United Kingdom any infringing copy of any such work:

he shall be guilty of an offence under this Act and be liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding forty shillings for every copy dealt with in contravention of this section, but not exceeding fifty pounds in respect of the same transaction; or, in the case of a second or subsequent offence, either to such fine or to imprisonment with or without hard labour for a term not exceeding two months.

(2) If any person knowingly makes or has in his possession any plate for the purpose of making infringing copies of any work in which copyright subsists, or knowingly and for his private profit causes any such work to be performed in public without the consent of the owner of the copyright, he shall be guilty of an offence under this Act, and be liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding fifty pounds, or, in the case of a second or subsequent offence, either to such fine or to imprisonment with or without hard labour for a term not exceeding two months.

(3) The court before which any such proceedings are taken may, whether the alleged offender is convicted or not, order that all copies of the work or all plates in the possession of the alleged offender, which appear to it to be infringing copies or plates for the purpose of making infringing copies, be destroyed or delivered up to the owner of the copyright or otherwise dealt with as the court may think fit.

(4) Nothing in this section shall, as respects musical works, affect the provisions of the Musical (Summary Proceedings) Copyright Act, 1902, or the Musical Copyright Act, 1906.

13. The provisions of this Act with respect to summary remedies shall extend only to the United Kingdom.

IMPORTATION OF COPIES

14.—(1) Copies made out of the United Kingdom of any work in which copyright subsists which is made in the United Kingdom would infringe copyright, and as to which the owner of the copyright gives notice in writing by himself or his agent to the Commissioners of Customs and Excise, that he is desirous that such copies should not be imported into the United Kingdom, shall not be so imported, and shall, subject to the provisions of this section, be deemed to be included in the table of prohibitions and restrictions contained in section forty-two of the Customs Consolidation Act, 1876, and that section shall apply accordingly

DELIVERY OF COPIES TO BRITISH MUSEUM AND OTHER LIBRARIES

15.—(1) The publisher of every book published in the United Kingdom shall, within one month after the publication, deliver, at his own expense, a copy of the book to the trustees of the British Museum, who shall give a written receipt for it.

(2) He shall also, if written demand is made before the expiration of twelve months after publication, deliver within one month after receipt of that written demand or, if the demand was made before publication, within one month after publication, to some depôt in London named in the demand a copy of the book for, or in accordance with the directions of, the authority having the control of each of the following libraries, namely: the Bodleian Library, Oxford, the University Library, Cambridge, the Library of the Faculty of Advocates at Edinburgh, and the Library of Trinity College, Dublin, and subject to the provisions of this section the National Library of Wales. In the case of an encyclopaedia, newspaper, review, magazine, or work published in a series of numbers or parts, the written demand may include all numbers or parts of the work which may be subsequently published.

(3) The copy delivered to the trustees of the British Museum shall be a copy of the whole book with all maps and illustrations belonging thereto, finished and coloured in the same manner as the best copies of the book are published, and shall be bound, sewed, or stitched together, and on the best paper on which the book is printed.

(4) The copy delivered for the other authorities mentioned in this section shall be on the paper on which the largest number of copies of the book is printed for sale, and shall be in the like condition as the books prepared for sale.

(5) The books of which copies are to be delivered to the National Library of Wales shall not include books of such classes as may be specified in regulations to be made by the Board of Trade.

(6) If a publisher fails to comply with this section, he shall be liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding five pounds and the value of the book, and the fine shall be paid to the trustees or authority to whom the book ought to have been delivered.

(7) For the purposes of this section, the expression "book" includes every part or division of a book, pamphlet, sheet of letterpress, sheet of music, map, plan, chart or table separately published, but shall not include any second or subsequent edition of a book unless such edition contains additions or alterations either in the letterpress or in the maps, prints, or other engravings belonging thereto.

JOINT AUTHORSHIP

16.—(1) In the case of a work of joint authorship, copyright shall subsist during the life of the author who first dies and for a term of fifty years after his death, or during the life of the author who dies last, whichever period is the longer, and references in this Act to the period after the expiration of any specified number of years from the death of the author shall be construed as references to the period after the expiration of the like number of years from the death of the author who dies first or after the death of the author who dies last, whichever period may be the shorter, and in the provisions of this Act with respect to the grant of compulsory licences a reference to the date of the death of the author who dies last shall be substituted for the reference to the date of the death of the author.

(2) Where, in the case of a work of joint authorship, some one or more of the joint authors do not satisfy the conditions conferring copyright laid down by this Act, the work shall be treated for the purposes of this Act as if the other author or authors had been the sole author or authors thereof: Provided that the term of the copyright shall be the same as it would have been if all the authors had satisfied such conditions as aforesaid.

(3) For the purposes of this Act, "a work of joint authorship" means a work produced by the collaboration of two or more authors in which the contribution of one author is not distinct from the contribution of the other author or authors.

(4) Where a married woman and her husband are joint authors of a work the interest of such married woman therein shall be her separate property.

POSTHUMOUS WORKS

17.—(1) In the case of a literary dramatic or musical work, or an engraving, in which copyright subsists at the date of the death of the author or, in the case of a work of joint authorship, at or immediately before the date of the death of the author who dies last, but which has not been published, nor, in the case of a dramatic or musical work, been performed in public, nor, in the case of a lecture, been delivered in public, before that date, copyright shall subsist till publication, or performance or delivery in public, whichever may first happen, and for a term of fifty years thereafter, and the proviso to section three of this Act shall, in the case of such a work, apply as if the author had died at the date of such publication or performance or delivery in public as aforesaid.

(2) The ownership of an author's manuscript after his death, where such ownership has been acquired under a testamentary disposition made by the author and the manuscript is of a work which has not been published nor performed in public nor delivered in public, shall be prima facie proof of the copyright being with the owner of the manuscript.

PROVISIONS AS TO GOVERNMENT PUBLICATIONS

18. Without prejudice to any rights or privileges of the Crown, where any work has, whether before or after the commencement of this Act, been prepared or published by or under the direction or control of His Majesty or any Government department, the copyright in the work shall, subject to any agreement with the author, belong to His Majesty, and in such case shall continue for a period of fifty years from the date of the first publication of the work.

PROVISIONS AS TO MECHANICAL INSTRUMENTS

19.—(1) Copyright shall subsist in records, perforated rolls, and other contrivances by means of which sounds may be mechanically reproduced, in like manner as if such contrivances were musical works, but the term of copyright shall be fifty years from the making of the original plate from which the contrivance was directly or indirectly derived, and the person who was the owner of such original plate at the time when such plate was made shall be deemed to be the author of the work, and, where such owner is a body corporate, the body corporate shall be deemed for the purposes of this Act to reside within the parts of His Majesty's dominions to which this Act extends if it has established a place of business within such parts.

(2) It shall not be deemed to be an infringement of copyright in any musical work for any person to make within the parts of His Majesty's dominions to which this Act extends records, perforated rolls, or other contrivances by means of which the work may be mechanically performed, if such person proves—

- (a) that such contrivances have previously been made by, or with the consent or acquiescence of, the owner of the copyright in the work; and
- (b) that he has given the prescribed notice of his intention to make the contrivances, and has paid in the prescribed manner to, or for the benefit of, the owner of the copyright in the work royalties in respect of all such contrivances sold by him, calculated at the rate hereinafter mentioned:

Provided that—

- (i) nothing in this provision shall authorise any alterations in, or omissions from the work reproduced, unless contrivances reproducing the work subject to similar alterations and omissions have been previously made by, or with the consent or acquiescence of, the owner of the copyright, or unless such alterations or omissions are reasonably necessary for the adaptation of the work to the contrivances in question; and
 - (ii) for the purposes of this provision, a musical work shall be deemed to include any words so closely associated therewith as to form part of the same work, but shall not be deemed to include a contrivance by means of which sounds may be mechanically reproduced.
- (3) The rate at which such royalties as aforesaid are to be calculated shall—
- (a) in the case of contrivances sold within two years after the commencement of this Act by the person making the same, be two and one-half per cent; and
 - (b) in the case of contrivances sold as aforesaid after the expiration of that period, five per cent.

on the ordinary retail selling price of the contrivance calculated in the prescribed manner, so however that the royalty payable in respect of a contrivance shall, in no case, be less than a halfpenny for each separate musical work in which copyright subsists reproduced thereon, and, where the royalty calculated as aforesaid includes a fraction of a farthing, such fraction shall be reckoned as a farthing:

Provided that, if, at any time after the expiration of seven years from the commencement of this Act, it appears to the Board of Trade that such rate as aforesaid is no longer equitable, the Board of Trade may, after holding a public inquiry, make an order either decreasing or increasing that rate to such extent as under the circumstances may seem just, but any order so made shall be provisional only and shall not have any effect unless and until confirmed by Parliament; but, where an order revising the rate has been so made and confirmed, no further revision shall be made before the expiration of fourteen years from the date of the last revision.

(4) If any such contrivance is made reproducing two or more different works in which copyright subsists and the owners of the copyright therein are different persons, the sums payable by way of royalties under this section shall be apportioned amongst the several owners of the copyright in such proportions as, failing agreement, may be determined by arbitration.

(5) When any such contrivances by means of which a musical work may be mechanically performed have been made, then, for the purposes of this section, the owner of the copyright in the work shall, in relation to any person who makes the prescribed inquiries, be deemed to have given his consent to the making of such contrivances if he fails to reply to such inquiries within the prescribed time.

(6) For the purposes of this section, the Board of Trade may make regulations prescribing anything which under this section is to be prescribed, and prescribing the mode in which notices are to be given and the particulars to be given in such notices, and the mode, time, and frequency of the payment of royalties, and any such regulations may, if the Board think fit, include regulations requiring payment in advance or otherwise securing the payment of royalties.

(7) In the case of musical works published before the commencement of this Act, the foregoing provisions shall have effect, subject to the following modifications and additions:—

(a) The conditions as to the previous making by, or with the consent or acquiescence of, the owner of the copyright in the work, and the restrictions as to alterations in or omissions from the work, shall not apply:

(b) The rate of two and one-half per cent shall be substituted for the rate of five per cent* as the rate at which royalties are to be calculated, but no royalties shall be payable in respect of contrivances sold before the first day of July, nineteen hundred and thirteen, if contrivances reproducing the same work had been lawfully made, or placed on sale, within the parts of His Majesty's dominions to which this Act extends before the first day of July, nineteen hundred and ten:

(c) Notwithstanding any assignment made before the passing of this Act of the copyright in a musical work, any rights conferred by this Act in respect of the making, or authorising the making, of contrivances by means of which the work may be mechanically performed shall belong to the author or his legal personal representatives and not to the assignee, and the royalties aforesaid shall be payable to, and for the benefit of, the author of the work or his legal personal representatives:

(d) The saving contained in this Act of the rights and interests arising from, or in connexion with, action taken before the commencement of this Act shall not be construed as authorising any person who has made contrivances by means of which the work may be mechanically performed to sell any such contrivances, whether made before or after the passing of this Act, except on the terms and subject to the conditions laid down in this section:

(e) Where the work is a work on which copyright is conferred by an Order in Council relating to a foreign country, the copyright so conferred shall not, except to such extent as may be provided by the Order, include any rights with respect to the making of records, perforated rolls, or other contrivances by means of which the work may be mechanically performed.

(8) Notwithstanding anything in this Act, where a record, perforated roll, or other contrivance by means of which sounds may be mechanically reproduced has been made before the commencement of this Act, copyright shall, as from the commencement of this Act, subsist therein in like manner and for the like term as if this Act had been in force at the date of the making of the original plate from which the contrivance was directly or indirectly derived:

* In 1928 the Board of Trade increased these rates to 3½% and 6½% respectively, the minimum being increased from ½d. to ¾d.

Provided that—

- (i) the person who, at the commencement of this Act, is the owner of such original plate shall be the first owner of such copyright; and
- (ii) nothing in this provision shall be construed as conferring copyright in any such contrivance if the making thereof would have infringed copyright in some other such contrivance, if this provision had been in force at the time of the first-mentioned contrivance.

PROVISION AS TO POLITICAL SPEECHES

20. Notwithstanding anything in this Act, it shall not be an infringement of copyright in an address of a political nature delivered at a public meeting to publish a report thereof in a newspaper.

PROVISIONS AS TO PHOTOGRAPHS

21. The term for which copyright shall subsist in photographs shall be fifty years from the making of the original negative from which the photograph was directly or indirectly derived, and the person who was owner of such negative at the time when such negative was made shall be deemed to be the author of the work, and, where such owner is a body corporate, the body corporate shall be deemed for the purposes of this Act to reside within the parts of His Majesty's dominions to which this Act extends if it has established a place of business within such parts.

PROVISIONS AS TO DESIGNS

22.—(1) This Act shall not apply to designs capable of being registered under the Patents and Designs Act, 1907, except designs which, though capable of being so registered, are not used or intended to be used as models or patterns to be multiplied by any industrial process.

(2) General rules under section eighty-six of the Patents and Designs Act, 1907, may be made for determining the conditions under which a design shall be deemed to be used for such purposes as aforesaid.

ABROGATION OF COMMON LAW RIGHTS

31. No person shall be entitled to copyright or any similar right in any literary, dramatic, musical, or artistic work, whether published or unpublished, otherwise than under and in accordance with the provisions of this Act, or of any other statutory enactment for the time being in force, but nothing in this section shall be construed as abrogating any right or jurisdiction to restrain a breach of trust or confidence.

SAVING OF UNIVERSITY COPYRIGHT

33. Nothing in this Act shall deprive any of the universities and colleges mentioned in the Copyright Act, 1775, of any copyright they already possess under that Act, but the remedies and penalties for infringement of any such copyright shall be under this Act and not under that Act.

INTERPRETATION

35.—(1) In this Act, unless the context otherwise requires,—

“Literary work” includes maps, charts, plans, tables, and compilations;

“Dramatic work” includes any piece for recitation, choreographic work or entertainment in dumb show, the scenic arrangement or acting form of which is fixed in writing or otherwise, and any cinematograph production where the arrangement or acting form on the combination of incidents represented give the work an original character;

“Artistic work” includes works of painting, drawing, sculpture and artistic craftsmanship, and architectural works of art and engravings and photographs;

“Work of sculpture” includes casts and models;

INTERNATIONAL COPYRIGHT

THE Act of Foundation of the International Union is the Convention of Berne, signed on September 9, 1886, and brought into force December 5, 1887. This Act was amended at Paris on May 4, 1896, by an additional Act, then entirely recast at Berlin on November 13, 1908. The Act of Berlin, which came into force on September 9, 1910, is known as the "Revised Convention of Berne."

An additional Protocol was signed at Berne on March 20, 1914, in order to allow countries belonging to the Union to restrict in certain circumstances the protection accorded to authors of a country not belonging to the Union.

The Convention of Berne, revised at Berlin, has in its turn been subjected to revision at Rome on June 2, 1928. The Act of Rome came into force on August 1, 1931.

The whole aim of International Copyright is (1) to grant to the citizens in one of the countries of the Union Copyright in the other countries of the Union, without any technicalities such as registration, printing, etc., and (2) to obtain a uniform duration of Copyright for the life of the author and fifty years afterwards. In a short treatise it is impossible to put forward all the details of a complicated series of Conventions with their varied exceptions, but (1) has been obtained; and (2) has been obtained in the majority of countries.

There are two essential points for the author:

1. What this International Copyright covers;
 2. The list of countries bound to the Union.
1. This covers without exception the work published in the language of the country of origin in all other countries, but translation rights
 - (a) under the Convention of Berne endured in other countries for ten years only from the date of publication in the country of origin;
 - (b) under the Act of Paris for the full term of Copyright in other countries, provided that if no translation was published in the language of any of the other countries in which the author desired to obtain Copyright within ten years from the date of publication in the country of origin, the right of translation fell into public domain;
 - (c) under the revised Conventions of Berne and Rome for the term of Copyright in other countries without limitation.
 2. Nearly all European countries with the exception of Russia are members of the International Conventions. The United States stands outside but grants copyright to other countries by proclamation of the President. Great Britain is one of the countries included, and has agreed to accept the proclamation; but copyright can only be secured in the United States upon compliance with certain technicalities.

As already mentioned, the above is not an exhaustive statement dealing with a very complicated legal international status, but will act as a rough guide to authors who desire to ascertain the extent, territorial and otherwise, to which their property is protected.

U.S. COPYRIGHT

It is essential that the British author should have some knowledge of the U.S. Law from the British point of view. Subject to certain technicalities it is possible to obtain Copyright protection. It is of the utmost importance therefore that an author should understand these technicalities, for if they are not accurately carried out his title fails and his property becomes valueless. In the space of a short article it is impossible to give an exhaustive statement of a long and badly drafted Act, but the necessary technicalities are set out:

1. Copyright in the U.S. is indivisible, what therefore would be the assignment of a portion of the copyright under the British Law, e.g., the assignment of the right to publish in book form, merely amounts to the guarantee of a licence in the U.S. But the assignment of Copyright covers everything that is copyright under the U.S. Act.

2. Under the U.S. Law only published works come under the statute, other rights are protected under the Common Law or in Equity.

3. All Writings of an Author can secure copyright, and must be registered under certain headings set out in the Act, but no error of classification will invalidate or impair the Copyright protection if it is otherwise secured.

The two most important headings from the British author's point of view are:—

- (a) Books including composite and cyclopaedic works, Directories, Gazetteers and other compilations.
- (b) Periodicals including newspapers.

4. The person in whose name the copyright is registered is entitled:—

- (a) To print, reprint, publish, copy, or vend the copyrighted work.
- (b) To translate, etc., to dramatise a non-dramatic work; to convert into a novel, etc., a dramatic work.
- (c) To deliver or authorise the delivery of the work in public for profit if it be an address, sermon, lecture or similar production.
- (d) To perform or represent the work publicly, if it is a dramatic work, and not reproduced in copies for sale, to vend any MS. or any record whatsoever thereof. To make or to procure the making of any transcription or record thereof by or from which in whole or in part it may in any manner or by any method be exhibited, performed, etc., and to exhibit, perform, and represent, etc., in any manner or by any method.
- (e) To perform the copyrighted work publicly for profit if it be a musical composition; and for the purpose of public performance for profit and for the purposes set forth in subsection (a) hereof, to make any arrangement or setting of it or of the melody of it in any system of notation or any form of record in which the thought of an author may be recorded and from which it may be read or reproduced.

CLAUSE 2 states that the Author of an unpublished work is protected at Common Law, or in Equity, and can prevent the copying, publication, or use of such unpublished work.

These are the most important details from the British author's point of view, necessarily curtailed in order to leave space for the essential technicalities.

TECHNICALITIES NECESSARY TO OBTAIN COPYRIGHT

1. Copyright Notice.—The affixing of a notice in each copy published or offered for sale in the U.S. by authority of the Proprietor except in the case of Books seeking “ad interim” copyright.

2. Registration.—The registration of the claim to Copyright in the Copyright Office at Washington.

3. Deposit of Copies in particular Cases.—A Copyright protection is granted in the following works if they are NOT produced for sale, by the deposit with their claim for copyright of one complete copy of the work:—

A lecture, etc.

A dramatic composition.

A dramatico-musical composition.

There are other paragraphs referring to “Motion Pictures, and Motion Picture Plays, etc.,” but the above are the most important for British authors.

4. Deposit of Copies.—The deposit of Copies promptly, after publication, of the complete copies of the best edition then published.

(a) If the work is published in a foreign country, if the author is a citizen or subject of that country, by deposit of one copy of the best edition then published.

(b) Or if the work be a contribution to a periodical for which contribution special registration is requested, one copy of the issue containing such contribution.

(c) Or if the work is not reproduced in copies for sale, then shall be deposited the copy, print, etc. etc., identifying reproduction accompanied in each case by a claim of Copyright.

5. Printings in the U.S.—Printing by type setting or “by every possible method of reproduction,” together with the binding, must be performed within the limits of the U.S. This covers the illustrations, etc., in the book. These printing details extend to the printed book or periodical (specified under headings (a) and (b) earlier in this article), except the original text of a book of foreign origin, in a language or languages other than English or to books published abroad in the English language seeking “ad interim” Copyright.

6. Affidavit with Deposit.—The deposited copies must be accompanied by the Affidavit under the official seal of an Office authorised to administer oaths in the U.S. duly made by the person claiming Copyright, or by the duly authorised Agent or Representative residing in the U.S., or by the printer who has printed the book.

7. Form of Copyright Notice.—The Notice of Copyright required shall consist either of the word “Copyright” or the abbreviation “Copr.” accompanied by the name of the Copyright proprietor. If the work be a printed literary or dramatic work, the notice shall include also the year in which the Copyright was secured by publication.

The Notice shall be applied in the case of a book or other printed publication upon its title-page, or upon the page immediately following, or if a periodical, either upon the title-page or upon the first page of text of each separate number, or under the title heading.

AS THE FORM OF NOTICE FOR REGISTRATION IS IMPORTANT, EQUALLY IMPORTANT ARE THE CONTENTS OF THE AFFIDAVIT, WHICH MUST BE IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE ACT, AND MUST CONTAIN THE INFORMATION THEREIN REQUIRED.

There are serious penalties for making a false Affidavit or affixing a false Copyright Notice with fraudulent intent; but there is some leniency extended to those who by accident or mistake omit the Copyright Notice, or fail to make a prompt deposit of copies.

BRITISH AUTHORS: FURTHER TECHNICALITIES

8. "Ad Interim" Copyright.—In the case of a book (see (a) and (b) classified headings) first published abroad in the English language, if the author desires to secure Copyright, he must deposit not later than sixty days from its publication one complete copy in the Library of Congress, with a request for the reservation of Copyright.

If the deposit is accompanied with a statement of the name and nationality of the author, and of the Copyright proprietor, and the date of publication of the book, the book acquires an "ad interim" Copyright, which shall endure for four months from such deposit.

If, within the period of "ad interim" copyright, an authorised edition of such book shall be published in the U.S. in accordance with the provisions and technicalities required:—

- (a) Manufacture,
- (b) Printing of the copyright notice on the back of the title page of the work,
- (c) Registration,
- (d) Filing of Affidavit,

then the "ad interim" Copyright will be extended to endure for the full term of Copyright.

The period of "ad interim" Copyright extends only to books.

In respect of works first published in Great Britain after September 5, 1939 "ad interim" Copyright has been extended for a period not yet (September, 1948), determined.

Action for Infringement.—No action or proceeding shall be maintained for infringement of Copyright until the provisions of the U.S. Act have been complied with.

WARNING

The Copyright must be registered in the author's name, and not in the name of the Publisher or Agent (English or American), as is frequently the case. The whole power of the author lies in this simple precaution, and he should see that there is no mistake.

The Case of Periodicals, including Newspapers.—As to what action a British author should take who desires to secure his Copyright in the U.S. and intends to publish it in the English language in a periodical or newspaper, the answer is open to doubt. The safest plan would appear to be that the article or story or instalments, if a serial, should be published simultaneously in both countries, and that the author, or his agent on his behalf, should take special care to see that all the other technicalities set out above required by the U.S. Act are carefully carried out.

He should take special care that the Copyright is registered in the author's name, and not under the "blanket" Copyright Notice of the proprietor of the magazine or newspaper.

Duration of Copyright.—Copyright endures for twenty-eight years from the date of first publication, with an extension of another twenty-eight subject to some further technicalities.

INFRINGEMENT

Then follow clauses dealing with infringement of Copyright, remedies, and penalties. No criminal proceedings can be maintained unless commenced within three years after the cause of action rose.

ASSIGNMENT AND FEES

A series of clauses dealing with assignments of Copyright and the rules and regulations for filing such assignments at the Copyright Office, Washington, technicalities which place further difficulties in the way of authors.

Statements as to the fees to be paid for the various transactions required by the Act.

Date of Publication.—This date is of some importance and is defined in the case of a work of which copies are reproduced for sale, or distribution, as the earliest date when copies of the first authorised edition are placed on sale, sold or publicly distributed by the proprietor of the Copyright, or under his authority; and the term "Author" shall include an employee in the case of works made for hire.

To set out clearly the many difficulties that the British author has to encounter in order to obtain his U.S. protection, it has been necessary to curtail the explanations of some less important portions of the Act. The most important thing is for the British author to know what technicalities are necessary to secure his property.

AN OUTLINE OF THE LAW OF LIBEL

By J. A. CROCKETT, Barrister-at-Law, Member of the Institute of Journalists.

DEFAMATION, which comprises both libel and slander was defined by the late Lord Cave as a "false statement about a man to his discredit." This short definition is an accurate one for all practical purposes and when such a statement is published to a third person it becomes actionable because "the law recognises in every man a right to have the estimation in which he stands in the opinion of others unaffected by a false statement to his discredit." To anyone who writes for publication be he journalist, author or playwright or even for that matter a painter of pictures or a photographer, the law of defamation is of very considerable importance.

"The freedom of the journalist," and this of course applies equally to the others mentioned above, "is an ordinary part of the freedom of the subject, and to whatever lengths the subject in general may go, so also may the journalist—no privilege attaches to his position."

Libel and slander are two distinct forms of defamation. Broadly speaking the difference between them is that printed defamation is libel and spoken defamation is slander so that clearly readers of this article will be more concerned with libel. It is, however, important to know the difference, because as soon as it is established that a statement is a libel, which has been published to a third person, then there is an action available to the person libelled whether he has suffered damage or not. In slander it is necessary to prove that actual damage has been suffered.

Alternative to the civil remedy for libel which results in an action for damages there is the criminal aspect from which may arise instead a prosecution against the author. A criminal prosecution can be brought when the libel is clearly calculated to cause a breach of the peace, whereas the purpose of the civil action is to vindicate the character of the person libelled. The important difference in the defence to these two forms of action is that in civil libel proof of the truth of the statement made is always a complete defence but in criminal libel it is not. It is only in relation to the criminal aspect of libel that the phrase "the greater the truth the greater the libel" has any foundation at all. There is no criminal aspect of slander.

The rule which most seriously concerns the author or journalist in his everyday work of writing for publication is that which arises from the decision made in the leading case of Hulton v. Jones. A firm of newspaper proprietors, Hulton & Co., published a humorous account of a motor festival at Dieppe in which imputations were cast upon the morals of a person named Artemus Jones, a churchwarden of Peckham. This person was intended to be, and the writer of the article and the editor of the paper believed him to be, purely fictitious. There happened to be, however, a barrister named Artemus Jones, who was not a churchwarden, who did not live at Peckham and who had not taken any part in any festival. He sued Hulton & Co. for libel and friends of his swore that they believed that the article referred to him. The jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff and this was upheld by the House of Lords. The Lords considered that if reasonable people thought the language used was defamatory of the plaintiff then it did not matter that the defendants did not intend to defame this particular person.

THE RISKS OF COINCIDENCE

This decision has placed writers of fiction and journalists almost entirely at the mercy of coincidence. Any person who happens to have the same name as that of a purely fictitious character in a book or article and who is unscrupulous enough to threaten the author or publisher with an action for libel, although he has not suffered any damage, will have cause of action. It is true that the action will not succeed in every case, but nevertheless the mere threat of it may lead the defendant to pay money in order to escape litigation. The liability of the author or publisher is, however, not quite such a foregone conclusion as might be thought. They are liable only if reasonable people identify the plaintiff with the person named, and therefore if it is clearly disclaimed that there is any intention to refer to a particular person, while such disclaimer would not be a defence in itself, if made sufficiently obvious it might go a long way towards deciding whether the evidence of identification was reasonable or not. This is the purpose of the statement "All characters in this story are entirely fictitious, etc."

This principle has been carried a stage further by the case of Newstead v. London Express Newspaper Ltd., in which the Court of Appeal held that it also applies where the statement in fact relates to a real person but is mistakenly thought by reasonable people to relate to another real person. In this case it was stated that "Harold Newstead, thirty-year-old Camberwell man" had been convicted of bigamy. It was true that a Camberwell barman of that name had been convicted of bigamy, but it was not true of the plaintiff, Harold Newstead aged about thirty, who assisted his father in a hairdressing business in Camberwell. The defendants were nevertheless held to be liable.

What is the answer to this from the author's point of view? He can only be advised that he must take as much care as is reasonably possible to avoid using names for fictitious characters which are likely to be confused with real persons and if he is writing of real persons must be careful to identify them so clearly that they will not be confused with other real persons. There is little more that can be said with the law as it is at present. There is no doubt that although an author may select his characters in all good faith as fictitious and with no desire to cause anyone any harm, he is still in some danger of unwittingly libelling some person of whose existence he has never heard.

COMMENT AND CRITICISM

"The freedom of the journalist," as we have already noted, "is an ordinary part of the freedom of the subject" and accordingly a writer has complete freedom to comment upon or criticise the works or behaviour of any individual so long as he keeps his criticism within certain prescribed limits. In order to justify his comments or his criticisms an author or critic must be able to show (i) the facts commented upon are true facts, (ii) the comments or criticisms are fair, and (iii) that the matter is one of public interest.

The writer having taken care to ascertain the truth of the facts upon which he comments is called upon to ensure that his comments are fair. An actual definition of the degree of fairness which is required is hard to find, but Lord Esher says "mere exaggeration or even gross exaggeration would not make the criticism unfair. However wrong the opinion expressed may be in point of truth, or however prejudiced the writer, it may still be within the prescribed limit. The question which must be considered is this—would any fair man, however prejudiced he may be, however exaggerated or obstinate his views, have said that which this criticism has said of the work criticised?"

It is essential that a critic or author should be very careful to make a clear distinction between that part of his writing which is comment and that part which is actual fact. "Comment in order to be justifiable as fair comment must appear as comment and must not be so mixed up with the facts the reader cannot distinguish between what is fact and what is comment." If comment is mixed up with fact so that it is impossible to distinguish one from the other, then it will all be treated as fact and the writer's only defence will be either privilege or justification, but he will most certainly not be able to plead a defence of fair comment.

Some publications are protected by absolute privilege. Among them are fair, accurate and contemporaneous reports of judicial proceedings and authorised reports of parliamentary proceedings.

The last form of libel with which the author is concerned is the obscene libel. This means the publication of any indecent matter or pictures and is a further aspect of criminal libel. According to a judicial decision "the test of obscenity is whether the tendency of the matter charged as obscenity is to deprave and corrupt those whose minds are open to such immoral influences." It is essential in obscene libel for the prosecutor to show that the author intended to corrupt public morals by the publication, and it is presumed for this purpose that the author intended the natural consequences of his acts. The author cannot offer as his defence that his object is to expose conduct which he considers to be immoral or pernicious. It may of course be justified if it is genuinely in the interests of art, science or learning generally.

This completes the outline of the law of libel as it particularly affects the author or journalist. It is felt by many to be unsatisfactory. Particular criticism attaches to the fact that the libelled person need not prove that he has suffered any damage. There is always present the risk of coincidence against which there is no absolute safeguard. If however the author takes care within the limits prescribed above then there is no doubt that he should be reasonably safe from the dangers to which he is exposed by the law as it is at present.

PUBLISHERS' AGREEMENTS

THERE are four kinds of agreement between authors and publishers:—

1. Outright Sale of Copyright.—Here the publisher pays the author a sum of money for all rights in the book. This is rarely done now by first-class publishers, except where children's books are concerned.

On the whole authors are advised against such an agreement since if the book proves a great success the author has no claim on the publisher to partake in any of the profits which may be made from sales or from the serial, film, dramatic or translation rights, etc. Authors are sometimes tempted to make this form of agreement to secure an immediate cash payment, but usually this can now be obtained by way of advance of royalty (see 2 below).

Outright selling of copyright demands caution and competent advice. If a book is in any way datable, a clause should be inserted in the Agreement which will make republication dependent upon revision by the author.

2. Royalty.—This is the most common form of agreement and in general the most satisfactory for all types of books.

The royalty is almost invariably a percentage of the published price, and as a rule will range round 10 per cent, being more for an established author and less for an unknown one and for such books as school textbooks. A general practice is to increase the royalty after the sale of so many thousand copies, with usually a lower scale of royalties for cheap editions. In most cases an advance on account of royalty is made, but there is no set rule about this, and it will largely depend on the publisher's opinion of the quick-selling prospects of the book.

3. Profit-Sharing.—Although this is not the most common form of agreement, there is much to be said for it where a book is likely to sell steadily over a number of years and if the author does not need an immediate return for his labours. Any such agreement should be carefully scrutinized to see that the publisher's charges for overheads and advertisement are based on a recognised scale of charges. If an author can afford to wait for his money, the profit-sharing agreement is one which can bring him not only more than he would get under any other system for a successful book, but can also by its very nature give the author a far deeper insight into publishing than any other method.

4. Commission.—The author pays the cost of production of the book and pays the publisher a percentage commission on sales for the use of his imprint and distributing machinery. The method is not recommended: if a publisher will not take a book under one of the other forms of agreement, it means that it will almost certainly be produced at a loss. But an established author commanding a large public might do well out of such an arrangement. It is also a useful arrangement where an author wishes to publish a learned work which might not by itself make any profit. Most publishers of repute, however, will from time to time undertake the publication of such learned works, even though they publish them at a loss. In fact a good publisher likes to have such books in his list, if they are really first-class or original, and also it is important to recognise that many publishers, though men of business first, are only too anxious to further the cause of learning and literature as much as they can. That is, as a rule, why they became publishers.

Conclusion.—It ought not to be necessary to emphasise that the most important thing about considering any publisher's agreement is the reputation and financial standing of the publisher. Moreover, authors are not always sufficiently aware that booksellers, who are after all his most important helpers, pay considerable attention to the publisher's imprint. When an author has chosen his publisher, it is well to recognise that their interests are bound up with each other. For this reason an author may be well advised to allow his publisher to negotiate subsidiary rights such as serial, dramatic, film and translation, all of which become of increasing importance as a book proves more successful.

Authors are strongly recommended to read The Truth About Publishing, by Sir Stanley Unwin (Allen & Unwin, 8s. 6d. net).

A GUIDE TO AUTHORS*

By SIR STANLEY UNWIN, LL.D.

PUBLISHERS are not necessarily either philanthropists or rogues. Likewise they are usually neither lordly magnates nor cringing beggars. As a working hypothesis, regard them as ordinary human beings trying to earn their living at an unusually difficult occupation. (It is easy to become a publisher, but difficult to remain one; the mortality in infancy is higher than in any other trade or profession.)

Remember that—pretty ladies sometimes excepted and they seldom produce the best MS.—the publisher is not interested in you until he is interested in your work. Let your manuscript therefore be your ambassador and do not mar its chances by insisting upon a quite unnecessary interview. The publisher will request you to call fast enough if he finds your work attractive.

Your manuscript is doubtless a masterpiece, but do not suggest that to the publisher, because all the most hopeless manuscripts that have come his way have probably been so described by their authors. The works of genius are apt to arrive unheralded, and it is for those that the publisher is looking.

Your manuscript is your baby, maybe your only child, but the publisher finds a dozen or so new babies on his doorstep every morning and has several thousand older children over-running his warehouse and his entire establishment, all of them calling simultaneously for his undivided attention.

With the best will in the world, therefore, there is a definite limit to the time he can spend on yours. Every moment of the publisher's time you waste on needless interviews and distracting telephone calls may be a moment less for the more important task of attending to your offspring.

* Reproduced, in a slightly abridged form, by permission of the author, from The Truth About Publishing, by Sir Stanley Unwin, LL.D. (Fifth Edition) (Allen & Unwin, Ltd.).

If you want your manuscript to make a good impression, bestow some care upon it and don't ask the publisher to look at it in instalments. Outward appearances do not matter, but slovenliness and inconsistency do. The fact that a manuscript is dog-eared does not distress a publisher, but the fact that a proper name is seldom spelt twice running in the same way; that a word capitalized on one page is not capitalized on the next; that the first and third chapters have headings, but the second none; that quotations are inaccurately given; that, in brief, the author has skimped his job, makes the worst possible impression upon the publisher as well as upon the publisher's reader. A little extra time spent on the preparation of the MS. is worth more to the author than the longest interview with a publisher, or any letter of introduction.

Bear in mind that in common with all human beings, publishers are fallible. They all, I imagine, wish they were not, but they all know (and admit) that they are. "Publishing fallibility" is too expensive an item in his trading account for any publisher to be in danger of overlooking it. If a publisher declines your manuscript, remember it is merely the decision of one fallible human being, and try another. Don't try to bully the first publisher into telling you why he declined it. He would (in most cases) be a fool to tell you, because, despite fervid assurances to the contrary, not one author in a hundred wants aught but praise of his offspring.

If a publisher accepts your manuscript, remember that in the long run it is the public which decides what the reward of authorship shall be; that the public is a fickle paymaster, and that if it decides to reward handsomely some disher-up of scandal, and to grant the learned historian or philosopher nothing, the publisher is not to blame. If the public will not buy your book the publisher cannot make money either for you or himself. The source of profit, strange as it is to be compelled to reiterate the fact, is the difference between what a book costs to manufacture and what the booksellers pay the publisher for it. A profit cannot be made out of selling a book for what it costs to produce. It is astonishing how many authors think it can; who assume, in fact, that the laws of arithmetic do not apply to publishers.

"All is not gold that glitters." The most effective advertiser is not usually the most showy, just as the most efficient doctor is not often the one with the largest doorplate. The widespread distribution of a book in every corner of the globe does not begin and end with advertisements in two Sunday papers. It is a process laboriously built up brick by brick. It is one thing to be able to sell a book for ten or twelve weeks—quite another to do so for ten or twelve years. These are points to bear in mind when choosing your publisher, but there are others. Does he really know his job? If he does, trust him to get on with it; if he does not, do not go to him. Is he financially sound—beyond a peradventure? If he is, the hardest bargain he may drive is likely to prove more profitable to you than the most alluring contract with an insolvent firm. A 10 per cent royalty that arrives the day it is due is better than a 20 per cent royalty that is never forthcoming.

The most stable firms are usually those which have a strong back list of publications with a continuous and profitable sale and who therefore have no need to gamble to secure new business.

Having chosen your publisher, co-operate with him, but do not start out to teach him his job. It is not co-operating, but positively hindering him, to ring him up on the telephone when a postcard or a letter would be equally or probably more effective. Never bother the head of a firm with a departmental job. Publishers are not usually either expert shorthand-typists or telephone operators, but never a day goes by when authors do not (quite needlessly) try to use them as such. If lengthy instructions must be given over the telephone (they should in any case be confirmed in writing), it would seem more rational to ask a shorthand-typist to take them down than to expect the head of the firm laboriously to do so in longhand, and it is much quicker to telephone the department concerned than to insist upon speaking to the head of the firm and asking him to telephone to the department for the information desired.

Just as you can take a horse to the water but cannot make it drink, a publisher can take a new book to a bookseller, but cannot make him buy. Over ten thousand new books are published every year, and booksellers can of necessity only stock a selection of them. Because your friends affect surprise that your book is not in stock at the local newsagent, there is no need for you to do so.

The fact that a best seller or a cheap reprint is on a railway bookstall is no reason why your book should be. It will not become a best seller just because it is put on a bookstall; it is much more likely to become soiled stock. The railway bookstall proprietors, who see all the new books, know better than anyone else what they can and cannot sell, and if they decide against yours, the chances are at least a hundred to one upon their being right.

Every new book issued by a well-established publisher is shown before publication to the London booksellers and either before publication or shortly thereafter to all the principal booksellers in the provinces. The fact that the particular bookseller's assistant you interviewed had never heard of your book is no evidence that your publisher was negligent. On the contrary, it may merely mean on the one hand that when the book was "subscribed" the bookseller declined it, or on the other that the assistant is not following the lists of new publications in the book trade papers as carefully as he might.

But any bookseller or bookstall ought to be able to execute an order for your book promptly, and if any difficulty is experienced your publisher should be immediately advised.

Despite all impressions to the contrary, the selling of new books is seldom a lucrative business; too few people buy them. Possibly you have observed that even your own friends and acquaintances unblushingly try to "cadge" copies of your books. Pocket your pride (or your snobbery!) and tell them boldly that if they don't think the book worth buying, you would rather they did not read it; and do your part in educating the public into a deeper appreciation of books by joining the National Book League and working for it.

The growing commercialization of literature—inevitable though it may be—does not tend to promote more harmonious relations between authors and publishers. It is based on the assumption that manuscripts and books are mere commodities; dead, not living things. Such an assumption ignores the peculiar and indeed parental relationship of the author to his work, the realisation of which is the beginning of wisdom in a publisher.

Two last points: If a publisher has had enough faith in you to go on losing money over the publication of your early and possibly immature work, it is not cricket either to take your first readily saleable MS. elsewhere without submitting it to him or to expect him to bid for it in competition with others who have not spent a penny in helping to establish your reputation. It is even more unsporting to ask a literary agent to kick away on your behalf the ladder which has enabled you to climb.

Finally, read your contract and remember that your publisher is just as much entitled to expect you to honour your signature as you are to insist upon his honouring his.

SERIAL RIGHTS

It is not intended to write an essay on the definition of copyright, or to deal with that subject exhaustively, except so far as it refers to Great Britain, but merely to deal with the subject as it affects production in the magazines, periodicals, papers, and annuals, and any publication the property in whose contents can be classed as serial rights; and with the mercantile values, not the artistic values.

In the first instance it is necessary to show how an author should guard himself, and the methods by which he should secure his contract, and then to show how he may avoid falling into the many pitfalls which are the result of indefinite contracts,

It is a curious fact that the word serial or serial use does not occur in the Act. But the words have become of such common use in contracts that their sense or their limitations are universally understood.

Perhaps a good definition of serial rights would be the right to publish in a newspaper, magazine, or similar periodical—an annual has been held to be a similar periodical.

But the author must realise that in the sale of serial rights without limitation he sells (1) the first serial use—what editors generally require, (2) the second serial use, often sold to provincial papers and to the colonies, and (3) the right to repeat the publication in serial form wherever and whenever an editor may desire. There is also (4) a simultaneous publication of the first serial use when it is necessary to acquire copyright for the work in the United States.

He may therefore in his ignorance be selling many valuable markets when he sells “serial rights.” There are certain syndicates that make a habit of purchasing these rights without limitation and selling them all over the world.

The simplest method of all is for the author, when he sends in his MS., to put forward his own terms of contract. If the MS. is published without further correspondence it is taken to be published on the terms set out.

If the editor desires to vary the terms, then he must write the author a letter, in which case, if the MS. is finally published, it will be published on the contract set out in a series of letters.

Acknowledgment.—The first thing that an author should look out for is to obtain an acknowledgment of the arrival of the MS. Without this he is without knowledge as to whether the MS. has been lost or whether it is receiving the editor's attention.

The main points which an author should look for in his contract are:

1. The licence he gives.
2. The price he obtains.
3. The date of payment.
4. The date of publication.

1. When the author omits the statement as to what licence he is offering, then if the editor prints the article without a letter of acceptance he will be taken legally to have purchased the first serial use. If the MS. is merely accepted without any added conditions, the editor still will be taken to have purchased the first serial use.

The editor, who ought by virtue of his position to have an accurate knowledge of the business as well as the artistic side, is nearly always as unbusinesslike as the author. In consequence the author will have to be careful not to give away foolishly after publication what he never intended to give, and what the editor had no desire to ask—before publication.

Many business firms send receipts with their cheques claiming for all “serial rights” or “the copyright.” It is an easy matter for the author to cash the cheque, alter the receipt to the exact terms of the contract, and return it. But that course is rendered impossible by certain super-business corporations, who have a printed endorsement at the back of their cheques which purports to convey, in many cases copyright and in many rights which the author never intended to convey.

The author's difficulty in these circumstances cannot be exaggerated, as the bank has instructions not to pay the cheque if the endorsement is altered. The author in most cases, either fearing to lose a valuable market if he disputes the treatment or needing the money, signs the cheque and gives away valuable property, which in all probability the corporation or proprietor will never use. Some of the best-known corporations indulge in this objectionable practice, so that an author cannot be too careful. He must not think that because a proprietor, or his magazine, has a big name before the public that it follows that he—the proprietor—will not make the best bargain he can at the expense of the author; but this method of treatment is no bargain in the accepted sense of the word.

If an editor, acting for the proprietor, desires to purchase the copyright, or world serial rights, or any other right or share, he must state this clearly before the article or story is published.

2. Many authors are shy of stating the price they claim for their work in case the MS. should be thrown back upon their hands, and therefore—businesslike on other points—neglect to insert the amount they require per thousand words.

It may be conceded that with certain editors and certain proprietors it is unnecessary to mention a figure, as the figure usually paid is well known. But with other editors and other proprietors, to mention the price is essential if an author desires to avoid a dispute, especially in the case of a large corporation which owns a number of papers. It sometimes happens that the editor of one paper may pass the material on to another editor, and the contribution will be published where it was never meant to appear and where the ruling prices are entirely different.

An author must not think that he is bound to accept any payment that is made, nor does the fact that the editor asserts that the rate is the usual rate of the paper determine the validity of the contract. The price must be a reasonable price.

In cases of dispute, however, the author often fears, as in the case of cheque endorsement, to lose a market, or is in need of money, and accordingly the wicked flourish in their wickedness. It should be the duty of a businesslike editor dealing with an unbusinesslike author to have a regular stereotyped form which should be posted to the author on acceptance, stating the right or rights he desires to purchase and the price that the proprietors pay per thousand words or per column or page for those rights.

3. The date of payment is another vital point in the contract. All articles and stories should be paid for on acceptance, and there should be no exception to this rule save where an editor, for some special reason, wants to reconsider the copy, but then only on his notifying the author of his intention.

This, unfortunately, is not a universal custom, and in consequence, again disregarding the position of the worker, the editor does not as a general rule specify any special time for payment, and again in many cases the author does not care to insist upon his rights.

The legal position, if the MS. is accepted, is that the author, in the absence of any special contract, is entitled to be paid on acceptance. If the editor states that he will pay on publication, then publication must be within a reasonable time. Payment cannot in that case be delayed indefinitely.

If the MS. is published within a reasonable time, an author should remember that papers and magazines have, for the sake of their financial departments, definite days on which payments are made, and they should not therefore trouble an editor or manager unnecessarily. An author, however, should not be satisfied if the delay becomes longer than a month.

No editor is entitled to use the work of an author without any payment unless he states the fact to the author before publication and the author agrees. If the work is published without any such notification the author is entitled to be paid his usual rate of payment.

4. Finally arises the date of publication. This perhaps is the most difficult point to demand of an editor, but still most essential while the United States Copyright Law stands as it does, when in order to secure United States copyright, publication in the U.S.A. must be made within a certain time from the publication in England and subject to certain technicalities.* To arrange this matter of the U.S.A. copyright is difficult for the British author.

It is not merely with a view to obtaining the United States copyright that the date of publication is important. It is most important if the article is a topical article, and also if the publication may interfere with other contracts.

Second and other Serial Rights.—When an author has dealt satisfactorily with the first serial use he must not think that his serial rights are necessarily exhausted. There are syndicates that buy second serial rights and give quite good sums for them. They get back the value by selling them to Dominion papers, or running them through provincial papers. But the author should be exceedingly careful in these cases to grant a licence and not to sell a right, and the licence should be limited in terms. It might even be necessary to exclude publication in certain papers or periodicals. He must be sure, however, that he is conveying only the second serial right or licence to produce. The remaining serial rights or licences have been known, especially in the case of short stories, to bring in quite substantial sums years after the original serial publication. It is not always easy to sell the second serial use and subsequent use in serial form, and the remuneration is naturally not as high as that paid for the first publication; but the author may get additional readers and his work may become widely popular if pushed through these channels, so that he obtains a wider public for his work.

United States and Serial Rights (1924).—Before closing this article it will be as well to say a few words about the present American Act.

As already pointed out, the date of publication from the point of view of the author desiring to acquire United States copyright is essential. For if the article is published in the United States prior to its publication in England the British copyright is lost. It is safest that the publications should be simultaneous.

An author, however, must not think he is out of the wood when he has arranged the suitable dates and has sold the United States' first serial use to an American editor. The editor or proprietor of the magazine, in the absence of a special contract, registers the magazine at Washington and takes out copyright in the magazine and its contents as a whole. It is necessary, therefore, that for an author to obtain a retransfer of the copyright in his own individual article such reassignment should be signed by the proprietor of the magazine or a reasonable official of the corporation which owns the magazine, and should be promptly recorded in the copyright office at Washington.

The only criticism of this form is in regard to the words in brackets: "for the right of magazine publication." Authors are advised in the matter of the United States market, just as in the English market, to grant merely the first serial use to the proprietors of a magazine and should understand that, if their work is published without any specific contract, it is only the licence which they will have granted.

One of the leading authorities on copyright in America points out that since American copyright, unlike English, is indivisible, any grant of particular rights in it, limited in any way whatsoever, operates merely as a licence and not as a technical assignment.

Therefore, it is of the utmost importance that an author should have his American copyright registered in his own name, otherwise he might be severely handicapped in dealing with portions of his property.

If the copyright in an author's work has been registered in the name of a magazine proprietor, and if the author wishes to negotiate with a publisher for the production of the same work in book form, he will either have to make the magazine proprietor a party to the contract or procure from him a declaration that he (the magazine proprietor) is the registered holder of the copyright in the work in trust for the author.

Another difficulty might arise in regard to cinema rights. The American cinema trade has a lawyer deputed to investigate titles. He might advise a cinema producer to refuse any work the copyright of which was not registered in the author's own name, or demand that the matter should be adjusted before he deals with the author direct.

Manuscripts.—When the article is a topical article it is as well that the author should add a note to this effect in his covering letter, that if the article is not accepted by a certain date he intends to use it elsewhere, and will hold the editor responsible if the article is used after the date mentioned. If the article is not topical, no author should allow his MS. to rest with an editor over a fortnight without a formal acknowledgment, or over a month without a formal contract.

In most of the points mentioned difficulties arise through the lack of consideration shown by editors and proprietors.

IN CONCLUSION WE SHOULD SAY THAT IN THE END IT PAYS AN AUTHOR TO BE A MAN OF FEARLESS BUSINESS HABITS, AND AN EDITOR TO BE KNOWN AS ONE OF STRICT BUSINESS CAPACITY AND INTEGRITY.

THE CENSORSHIP OF PLAYS

At least seven days before the public performance of a new play a copy of the play must be submitted to the Lord Chamberlain giving the date of the production and the building (which must be licensed for the performance of stage-plays) where the first performance will take place. Plays can be submitted by the Licensee or the Manager of a theatre, or the author or producer, but licences will only be issued to Managers of theatres. It should be noted that licences are not granted to authors.

A play cannot be licensed with an alternative title, and a change of title cannot be sanctioned unless a satisfactory reason is given. When any additions or alterations are made to an old stage-play, or any proposed alterations or additions to a play already licensed, the Lord Chamberlain's permission must be obtained before such alterations are produced. If new matter is introduced into pantomimes or revues to make them topical or up-to-date, they must be re-read and re-licensed by the Lord Chamberlain.

The Scale of Reading Fees (which should be paid when the play is submitted) are as follows:

1 Act with not more than four Scenes	£1 1 0
All other plays	2 2 0
Additional Scenes to Plays, Revues or Pantomimes already licensed	1 1 0

Copies of plays should be submitted to the Comptroller, The Lord Chamberlain's Office, St. James's Palace, S.W.1, and if desired accompanied by application forms which can be obtained from the Lord Chamberlain's Office, together with a copy of the Regulations. Plays must be typewritten and in good condition, and should not be submitted unless all the particulars mentioned above are available. Copies of Plays are not returned, but are retained by the Lord Chamberlain.

One or two points should be particularly stressed. What constitutes a public performance? Section 16 of the Theatres Act of 1843 defines it as "every case in which any money or other reward shall be taken or charged directly or indirectly, or in which the purchase of an article is made a condition for the admission of any person into the theatre to see any stage-play, and also in every case in which any stage-play shall be acted or presented in any house, room or place in which distilled or fermented excisable liquor shall be sold." Another important point is that public performances must only take place in buildings licensed for that purpose. In the past many amateur dramatic societies, often quite unwittingly, have offended in these particulars; they have neglected to obtain the Lord Chamberlain's licence when presenting a new play, and they have given public performances of plays in places not licensed for them. An author allowing a society to perform a play of his for the first time should ensure that these conditions are fulfilled.

TRANSLATIONS

It is difficult to advise the many amateur writers who desire to know how to obtain commissions to translate books. Free-lances rarely possess a knowledge of out-of-the-way languages and rely for the most part on acquaintance with French and German. The proposition is the more difficult because most important publishing houses have what we may call "opposite numbers," and between them exists a constant interchange of knowledge and suggestion connected with forthcoming, or recently published, books. Long-established publishers have their tried and trusty translators, and into this circle an outsider, with limited literary experience, will find it hard to penetrate.

Earnings are overestimated by the inexperienced. Most translators are paid a sum down and often an extremely small sum, and unless unusual arrangements are made they are entirely outside the royalty system, which belongs, of course, to the author. As a rule, however remarkable the success of a book, little kudos attends its translator, who is lucky if he gets a chance mention in one or two reviews.

Again, amateur writers seem to think that a knowledge of two languages equips them for the arduous work of translation. Much more than that is required. Whether the work to be translated is an historical book or a novel, the translator must have a working knowledge of the period covered, and infinite patience in the search for corresponding expressions and in the recasting of sentences. He has also the task of seeing the book through the press; and in many cases those who feel themselves fitted to translate have no experience of conducting a book through its various phases, any more than they could, in the case of an historical or biographical work, prepare an index, and possibly write an introduction.

A competent beginner who feels himself able to cope with all the work of a translation is advised to try and find a first-class book of a literary and provocative nature, which has not in the country of its origin received the notice it merits. The next move is to endeavour to interest a publisher in it having first consulted the author of the book and obtained his interest and permission to translate.

ENEMY COPYRIGHTS

At the outbreak of war in 1939 Enemy Copyrights were placed under the control of the Patent Office. At the time of this 1949 edition of the Year Book going to press the control still remains, though it is possible that the arrangement may be modified during the year. Anyone wishing to translate a book, the copyright of which belongs to an enemy or an enemy subject, or to exercise the copyright in any other way, should first consult the regulations laid down in Patents, Designs, Copyright and Trade Marks (Emergency) Rules, 1939 (Statutory Rules and Orders, 1939, No. 1375), which can be obtained from the Stationery Office, price 3d.

ABOUT THE SALE OF A PLAY

By MURIEL PRATT, revised by JOAN LING

THE sale of a play or, rather, the sale of the Dramatic Rights in a play, may nowadays take one or all of many forms. The principal are as follows: Rights for the production in the West End of London and the Colonies, except Canada; in America and New York and Canada; in Ireland; in the Provinces of England; in Continental Countries and last rights for a "try-out" for either a night or a week.

Rule for Playwrights.—It is quite certain that no amateur playwright, that is no one negotiating the sale of a first play, should ever conduct such a sale for himself. There are nowadays too many difficulties. He should consult either the Society of Authors, a reputable Play Agent, or his own solicitor, but he should be warned that his own solicitor may not be conversant with theatrical precedent.

Copyright.—An author should never part with his copyright. In slightly less technical terms, an author should never be tempted to sell his play nor any part of it outright, except the picture rights.

Steps in the Sale of a Play.—When either the author or the author's agent has convinced some manager of the advisability of buying the rights of the play under consideration and when it has been ascertained that the would-be purchaser is sound financially and capable of fulfilling the various clauses of the contract, a memorandum of agreement should be drawn up giving the manager the exclusive licence to perform the play for the consideration mentioned in the agreement.

Consideration.—The consideration consists of the agreements on the part of the manager mentioned in the contract. They consist primarily in the payment of sums varying from £50 to £500 in advance of royalties. This sum is not returnable under any circumstances, but should the Lord Chamberlain refuse a licence, the Author is liable to return the advance.

Various Rights covered by the Contract: British Empire.—The agreement or contract gives the manager an exclusive licence to perform the play with living actors in all parts of the British Empire exclusive of Canada and Ireland.

Royalties.—The money paid for a play is called a royalty. The usual royalties that are paid for a production in the West End of London are:—

5 per cent of the gross taking, exclusive of entertainment tax, up to £800 or £1000 a week.

7½ per cent of the gross taking, exclusive of entertainment tax, up to £1200 or £1500 a week.

10 per cent of the gross taking, exclusive of entertainment tax, over £1200 or £1500 a week.

The royalties can be as low as 3 per cent of the gross for a little-known author or for a play that is agreed to be of small commercial value. They can be as high as 12 per cent of the gross for a play by a famous author. When a play has been "tried-out" before the play is bought for West End production the royalties usually begin at 6 or 7½ per cent.

Royalties on Provincial Rights.—Unless the play has a very large and expensive cast, royalties for the Provinces are the same now as for the West End.

American Rights.—The manager usually has an option to purchase the American rights of the play after he has produced the play in the West End for a run. It is usual to pay a sum of at least £200 for these in advance of royalties.

Cinematograph Rights.—Provided the manager has given an agreed number of performances of the play in the West End of London, he is entitled to receive a share of any money received by the author for the sale of the film rights in the play. The share varies from a maximum of 50 per cent to a minimum of 25 per cent, or in the event of a "try-out" it is sometimes as low as 10 per cent.

In the event of an American sale the English manager usually cedes some of his share to the American manager. Provision should be made that the author never receives less than one-third of total money paid.

Note.—Many authors make a fight not to give the manager any share in the film rights but, so far, very few have won their fight.

Reservation of Rights.—The author should reserve to himself amateur, translation and mechanical reproduction rights, and Repertory Rights. In the latter case this will be subject to a share of the author's royalties being paid to the Management who produces his play in the West End and on tour, for the life of that agreement.

Further Clauses in the Agreement: Duration of Agreement.—The manager becomes the possessor of the rights in the play for a period of six months or a year. The length of time varies with the amount of advance royalty paid. Special arrangements can be made to meet special cases.

Standard of Production.—The manager must agree to produce the play in a manner suitable to the standard of production for the West End of London and with a cast of well-accredited actors.

Advertisement.—The manager agrees that the author's name shall be prominently displayed on all billing and advertisement matter.

Alteration of the Text.—No alteration should be made to the text without the author's approval. An author must protect himself by this clause, but if he trusts his producer he would be wise to allow him a fairly free hand with alterations.

Choice of Cast and Producer.—The author has the right to veto the choice of any actor or producer. This clause should be insisted upon but until the author is well known it is sometimes very difficult to do so.

Presence at Rehearsal.—The author has the right to be present at all rehearsals. Incidentally the wise author does not insist on this as in practice it is found that the author's presence at all rehearsals hampers both producer and artists. It is best if the author is present at early rehearsals in case of needed alterations and then absents himself until a few days before production.

Dates of Payment.—Nightly accounts, called returns, should be sent to the author or his agents and payments should be made weekly not later than the Wednesday in the week following the last week of performance. For tours the payment is usually made on the Friday following. For America the returns should be sent by the first mail leaving after the end of the week in which performance has been given.

Number of Performances necessary to retain the Licence.—Unless the manager gives 75 performances in a year or pays the royalties on the average of 75 performances then he loses his licence to perform the play.

To prevent Premature Withdrawal of the Play.—There should be a clause stating that the play shall not be withdrawn unless the takings fall below a mutually agreed sum.

Assignment of Agreement.—The manager must not assign any part of the rights without the written consent of the author.

Return of Script.—At the end of the run all scripts and parts provided by the author should be returned to him.

No Partnership.—Nothing in the agreement must be deemed to constitute a partnership.

Cessation of Licence—If the manager becomes bankrupt or fails to make the correct payments then the agreement can be terminated by a letter from the author to that effect.

Repertory Rights.—The Repertory Rights in the play are now very valuable. They must be dealt with by the Author's Agent, or there are one or two reputable agents who deal entirely with plays for repertories and who will arrange performances. Royalties from 5 to 10 per cent are payable for Repertory Rights, and the theatre has no right in the play except permission to perform the play for one week.

Amateur Rights.—These also have a good deal of value nowadays. They are most often dealt with by one particular firm who will publish the play, buy the amateur rights outright or pay the author a percentage of all monies received. The usual fee paid for an amateur performance is 10s. 6d. for a one-act play to 5 guineas per performance for a straight play. They own no rights but have permission to perform it for one or more performances. The amateur rights are not set free till a specified time after the tour of the play has been sent out.

Translation Rights.—If a play is sold to a foreign country, great care should be taken to make sure that the author gets his money. Also care should be taken that the translation is a good one and that too many liberties are not taken with the text. The author usually shares his royalties with the translator in the ratio of 50/50 or 60/40 according to the relative importance of the two authors.

A Try-out.—The habit of trying out a play has grown enormously during the last few years and is not looked upon with disfavour. An author who has failed to sell his play in the commercial theatre and still believes in it, is often tempted to have it performed either for a week at one of the try-out theatres or for a Sunday night at one of the clubs. Many managers nowadays rarely buy a play that has not been tried on the public in some form or other.

Only about 10 per cent of these performances result in a West End run.

The author should remember that, through no fault of the manager, the chances of getting an unsuitable cast and a poor production are much higher than when the play is to be performed for a run. If, however, he decides to run the risk, he must be careful of what rights he gives away.

The importance of Try-Out theatres cannot be over stated. A play has a double chance when so presented to the public—the Author can see his own work and thereby far more clearly judge its merits or demerits, and managers can more readily judge the play's possibilities when they see it. The only drawback from the author's point of view is the question of what rights a Try-Out theatre is entitled to, and one cannot impress too strongly on an author the advisability of having a theatrical solicitor draw up such a contract or being protected by an Agent.

Most of the details of the contract should be the same as for the West End, but the author generally agrees to pay the manager 1 per cent of the gross receipts if the play is moved to the West End and 10 per cent of the picture rights in the event of a picture sale. The author should not agree to more than this. Sometimes the author is asked to pay something towards the cost of the production; usually a sum varying between £50 and £250, but this is a practice that I greatly deplore and Authors should not put money into their own play.

American Rights.—Whether a play is sold direct to America or whether the play is sold through an English production a contract is made for all plays in the United States which is subject legally to the Minimum Basic Contract.

Minimum Basic Contract.—The author should, before signing a contract, read this carefully to see whether it agrees in all necessary particulars with the above. He can get a copy from the Authors' League.

Canadian Rights.—The Canadian rights are always included in the American rights.

Picture Rights.—The American manager can legally claim a share of these which should not be more than 50 per cent.

Royalties.—The royalties mentioned in the Minimum Basic Contract are the minimum terms. The usual terms for America at the time of writing are

5 per cent on the first 5000 dollars of the gross box office receipts.

7½ per cent on the next 2000 dollars.

10 per cent on all sums over that.

Varied Prices.—As the prices at American theatres are not fixed, the question of gross receipts are not so simple as in England. If a play is a success the prices rise accordingly and there is much speculation in seats.

On the other hand many plays have run for years at what is known as "cut rates," i.e. cheap prices.

Cinematograph Rights.—A play should always be sold outright for the films. Sometimes a sum down and royalties is suggested but, in my opinion, this is not a good method. The royalties are difficult to check up and difficult to collect. The sums paid vary enormously. The author may accept as little as £350 for a play that has not been produced. As much as £10,000 or more is not an unusual sum for a very successful play. The author sells for this sum the exclusive rights to make the story into a picture and to distribute and sell the picture.

It is almost impossible for the author to protect himself against the changing of the dialogue, the venue of the play, the characters, even the plot and title.

Radio Rights.—Again, these rights should be handled by a bona fide Agent, and it is a market of considerable importance. As a shop window and as a means of letting the author hear his own work, it is a highly valuable medium. Fees are not high, but they pay for work done and the subsidiary broadcasting rights add up to a good figure.

Musical Plays.—This is a difficult market at present but a time will come, in all probability very soon, when there will be a good market for this particular vehicle. The royalties for such plays are less than for straight plays, but on the other hand, they gross a great deal more. For the book of a musical, they usually pay 2½ per cent of the gross weekly box office receipts, 1½ per cent for the lyricist, and possibly 2 per cent to the Composer. The American royalties for musicals are not less than 6 per cent for all authors, 1 per cent to Composer, 1 per cent to book or sketches and 1 per cent for lyrics.

Duration of Sale.—The purchaser usually owns the rights either for ten years or for the whole of the period of the copyright.

THE WRITER AND INCOME TAX LIABILITY

By J. H. BURTON

Fellow of the Society of Incorporated Accountants and Auditors;
Fellow of the Institute of Taxation

MOST authors have at least two interests in their work, the literary and the financial. Few, indeed, wish to write purely as a hobby without monetary reward. With income tax at nine shillings (which, with surtax rises to nineteen shillings and sixpence) in the £, it is well to know something about the taxation of income from authorship.

Both royalties and the proceeds of outright sales arising from writing—whether professionally, for a livelihood or as a spare-time hobby for pleasure and pocket-money—when received by a person resident in this country are, as a rule, handed over “gross.”

A writer, whether of fiction, educational, or general matter may, for present purposes, be classified as either a salaried person or a free-lance. If the former, he is assessed under Schedule E, the tax being deducted from the remuneration by the employer under the recently introduced pay-as-you-earn scheme and he is only entitled to the very restricted deductions allowable under the rules relating to that Schedule, and these are limited to expenses incurred wholly, exclusively and necessarily in the performance of the duties of the office. And so, as the employer bears most of the expenditure incurred, comparatively little has to be met out of the salary.

The free-lance is assessable under Schedule D, and it is with such that this contribution mainly deals. If the writer practises the art more or less habitually he is assessed under Case II of Schedule D. If his writings are casual, infrequent, or perhaps a single work, he may be taxed under Case VI of Schedule D, or he may be immune from the impost.

An isolated sale of a manuscript such as happens when one writes a single contribution either by request (because one is an acknowledged expert on the subject matter) or spontaneously, may not be taxed if it can be regarded as a casual transaction, but it is likely that the Inspector of Taxes, if he knows of the affair, will try to get tax on the fee earned. More will be said about that point later.

A frequent contributor of articles, stories, news paragraphs, etc., to newspapers, magazines or other publications, or a writer of books for publication, is entitled by law to be regarded as carrying on the occupation or profession of an author. (Note—this income need not be the only means of his livelihood; in fact, it may be only a small part of the author's total income.)

An author should not submit to an assessment on the full amount of his fees earned. He is entitled to deduct therefrom all expenses necessarily incurred in the execution of his business or profession of author. The items of allowable expenditure are more numerous and costly than one is apt to imagine until examined. They include the following:

- (1) Press agent's fees.
- (2) Secretarial fees (if any).
- (3) Wages paid to typists employed direct.
- (4) Typewriting charges where the work is done by others, outside.
- (5) Repairs to and renewals of typewriting machines.
- (6) Stationery.
- (7) Postages.
- (8) Rent, rates, lighting, heating, water, repairs to building, cleaning, etc., of the rooms used by the author (being either the full cost, where the rooms are separate from the residence and are used solely for the purpose of literary work, or a proportion of the total cost of those items in regard to his house, flat or rooms, where the author works at home).

- (9) Travelling, where necessary to see agents, editors, or publishers, or to get "local colour" or information for one's work. If the travelling is done in one's own motor car a proportion of the cost of upkeep should be claimed as an expense of authorship.
- (10) Renewal (but not original cost) of reference books, etc.
- (11) Entertaining expenses, if incurred wholly necessarily and exclusively for the purpose of performing the occupation of author. (There may be some difficulty in securing this item as some Revenue officers are very conservative in this respect, but it should be insisted on, if it can be shown to have been necessarily incurred.) Hotel expenses in so far as necessary are additional to normal cost of living.
- (12) Subscriptions to journalists', authors', playwrights', or composers' societies, libraries, and news cuttings services.
- (13) Periodicals, if reasonably necessary in the performance of the work of authorship, but not those which merely train or prepare a person for that profession.
- (14) National Insurance contributions paid or borne by the author in respect of himself as an insured person under the National Insurance Act, 1946 (which became operative on the 5th July, 1948).
- (15) National Insurance contributions paid by an employer in respect of his (the employer's) proportion of the cost of insurance stamps placed on the cards of his employees (if any).
- (16) The proportion of payments (if any), made by an author to publishers as part of the cost of publishing his work, which sales in a year bear to the total number of copies printed.
- (17) Regularly recurring accountancy, auditing and legal expenses incurred in connection with the preparation of accounts for Inland Revenue purposes, but not any such items as are occasioned by appealing against tax assessments.

It is generally better to be assessed under Case II than Case VI, because where the author has other business, the profit or loss from which falls to be assessed under Case I or Case II, there is a legal right to aggregate (or "net") the profits or losses assessed under Cases I and II, but those under Case VI cannot be grouped with the others. Consequently if, in one year, a profit is made and assessed under Case VI (from literary work) and a loss is sustained on other activities assessed under Case I or II, income tax would have to be paid on the full amount of the literary profit (after taking off the admissible expenses), but without deducting the loss on the business assessed under Case I or II or vice versa. This might inflict a great hardship; one that is contrary to the spirit (though not the letter) of the income tax Acts.

Cash benefits received under the National Insurance Scheme (except the maternity and death grants), are taxable income.

SOME SPECIAL POINTS

It has been held (Daphne v. Shaw, 1927, 11 T.C. 265) that for the purposes of income tax assessments, books are not "plant and machinery" and therefore no wear-and-tear allowance may be claimed on the cost of the books where such outlay is not wholly allowable as an expense in the year in which it is incurred. Expenditure on renewals may, however, be claimed, as and when incurred.

A proper record should be kept of expenditure on travelling, hotels, etc., incurred in search of information, "colour," interviews, and the like, in order to support a claim for its allowance against profits.

The following excerpt from the judgment of Macnaghten, J. in Beare v. Carter (1940, 23 T.C. 353), is helpful:

"Copyright is property and a price paid for an out-and-out purchase of copyright is capital are propositions which are not disputed by the Crown. On the other hand, royalties are income and that is not disputed by the respondent."

No less important is it to bear in mind the dictum of Lawrence, J. in Billam v.

Griffith (1941, 23 T.C. 757), since it helps indicate the distinction between fixed capital (non-taxable) and circulating capital (taxable). He said:

"His brain being his fixed capital and his circulating capital being the plays which, no doubt, may for certain purposes be regarded as property but, at the same time, may be realised in the course of the business which he carried on."

And in Glasson v. Rougier (1944, 26 T.C. 86) Macnaghten, J. held that a sum received by a novelist for selling copyrights is as much assessable to income tax as are sums received as royalties.

Royalties and payments to persons whose place of abode is outside Great Britain and Northern Ireland are distributed "net," that is, after deduction of income tax at the standard rate in force at the time. These provisions do not, however, extend to royalties on copies of works shown to the satisfaction of the Special Commissioners of Income Tax to have been exported from the United Kingdom for distribution elsewhere. Where the royalties are paid to a person resident abroad through an appointed agent in this country, the assessment is made on the income after deduction of the agent's commission. Should the royalty be paid over without the deduction of such commission, the latter being paid subsequently, any tax overpaid will be refunded to the agent for remittance to the copyright owner. Agreements which provide for the payment of royalties in full to authors resident abroad are regarded as null and void and the recipient of the income renders himself liable to a penalty of £50 for refusing to allow the proper deduction of income tax at the source. The ordinary rules of residence apply and publishers have to use their discretion in determining whether or not, for the purpose in question, an author is resident abroad. If there is doubt, it is the safer plan to deduct tax before paying the royalties or fees.

RECENT LEGISLATION

Arising out of agitation made to the Chancellor of the Exchequer that in the United States of America writers who have been engaged on a particular piece of work for some years and then sell it for a lump sum are allowed, for tax purposes, to spread the figure over the period of production instead, as in Great Britain, of having to treat it as income wholly of the year of receipt, the Finance Act, 1944 (Section 24), has provided a somewhat similar concession. Briefly stated, that section deals with outright sales of copyright in literary, dramatic, musical and artistic works for a lump sum by providing that where the author has been engaged in the making of a work for a period of more than twelve months, on his making a claim for the purpose, the lump sum may be dealt with as follows. If the period does not exceed 24 months the lump sum payment may be treated as receivable to the extent of one-half only, on the date when it was actually receivable, and the other half shall be treated as having become receivable a year before that date. If the period in question exceeds 24 months, one-third of the sum may be regarded as receivable when it was actually receivable, one-third a year before that date and one-third two years before. A claim under this section must be made to the Commissioners of Inland Revenue not later than twelve months after the end of the year of assessment for which the lump sum would normally have fallen to have been included in assessment.

These provisions as to spreading also apply to advance payments to authors by publishers, and to grants of interest in a copyright.

In an article in the New Statesman in 1948, its author contended that the relief was inadequate since the advance payment on account of royalties on a book or play is nominal, perhaps only £50 or £100, whereas the royalties earned may reach several thousands of pounds. Only the advance and not the earnings can, under the statutory provision above alluded to, be averaged. The author went on to state that when the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced the concession, it was generally assumed to be a restoration of the principle of averaging out income as in the past, but the wording of Section 24, by accident or design, deprived the majority of authors from benefiting under the substance of the concession.

An author may produce a highly successful work—a best-seller, perhaps, and though making a big income in a single year, his income may dwindle very considerably, perhaps to next to nothing in the lean years that so soon follow. He pays tax at the standard rate and surtax at a high poundage too, in his peak period, and thus his actual profit retainable for himself may be very little indeed. It could be as little as sixpence in the pound earned.

AVOIDANCE OF DOUBLE TAXATION

The standard rate of income tax after being 10s. in the £ for some years, is still as high as nine shillings, and there is surtax on incomes in excess of £2000 a year. This burden, when borne alone, is heavy, yet income from literary, etc., work sold in the United States of America—and that market offers scope for writers in this country—has had to bear American tax too. Urge for immunity from double taxation was made for some time, and a Convention resulted in an agreement between the Governments of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the Government of the United States of America for “the avoidance of double taxation and the prevention of fiscal evasion with respect to taxes on income.” It was signed in Washington on the 16th April, 1945, and, while dealing with income of various kinds, so far as concerns that from royalties and the amounts paid as consideration for copyrights from sources in the United States by residents in the United Kingdom who are subject to United Kingdom tax on such royalties or other amounts and who are not engaged in trade or business in the United States, it is, by the Treaty referred to (Article VIII thereof), to be exempt from United States tax. Para. 2 of the same Article gives identical treatment in the reverse direction, i.e. exemption from United Kingdom tax on similar income derived from the United Kingdom by residents of the United States who are subject to the taxes of that country on such income, provided they are not engaged in trade or business in the United Kingdom.

Para. 3 of Article VIII prescribes that the term “royalties” shall be deemed to include rentals in respect of motion picture films.

Since the foregoing Convention the problem of double taxation has been the subject of statutory provision in sections 51 to 56 of the Finance (No. 2) Act 1945, which enact that agreements for relief from double taxation (declared by His Majesty by Order of Council) made with the Government of any territory outside the United Kingdom shall have effect in relation to income tax and surtax but the provisions for Dominion income tax relief under the Finance Act 1920, section 27, shall cease to have effect. The sections of the 1945 measure are difficult to understand. Briefly stated they are regarded as providing relief from double taxation by the allowance as a credit against tax payable in the United Kingdom of the figure payable in the country of origin.

Arrangements have already been made with a number of countries to give effect to this.

CASE LAW

Some further cases of importance to authors are the following:

In Hookey v. Bladen it was held that royalties received from a book of memoirs, though an isolated literary effort by a person not an author by profession, was taxable. (It is possible that an outright sale of the copyright of the book would have been exempt from taxation.)

In Jarvis v. Curtis Brown Ltd. (1929, 14 T.C. 744) the same principle was held to apply.

In Commissioners of Inland Revenue v. Longmans, Green & Co., Ltd. (1932, 17 T.C. 272) the decision showed that the results of the above-mentioned cases is not free from doubt in regard to future appellants, since in that case a lump sum payment was held to have been made on account of royalties and not for an assignment of copyright.

In Billam v. Griffith (1940, 23 T.C. 757), a person not being a professional playwright, sold the motion-picture rights in a play and was held to be taxable thereon.

In Beare v. Carter (1940, 23 T.C. 353) a sum received for the licence to publish the sixth edition of a single book was held not to be taxable. The copyright remained with the author.

In Hobbs v. Hussey (1942, 24 T.C. 153) the appellant had, for years, been preparing an account of episodes in his life and received £1500 from a Sunday paper for the serial rights thereof. It was his sole literary effort, but he was held to be taxable on his net profit therefrom.

In Glasson v. Rougier (1944, 26 T.C. 86) an authoress who had granted limited publishing rights in respect of three works in consideration for payment varying with the number of books sold, was held to be taxable, in spite of the decision in Beare v. Carter.

The case of Nethersole v. Withers (House of Lords, 27th February, 1948) concerned sums received for a grant of film rights. The appellant had dramatised one of the late Rudyard Kipling's novels and had agreed to dispose of the film rights, her share of the proceeds being one-third. Agreements with film producers yielded £8000 over a period of years, the dramatist's share being £2666. The Special Commissioners had upheld an assessment on her in this sum, under Case VI of Schedule D. The dramatist took the matter to the High Court where Macnaghten, J. upheld the assessment. The taxpayer then took the case to the Court of Appeal where the High Court decision was reversed, it being held that the transaction diminished the appellant's rights under the agreement and that the sums received were capital in character, no part being distinguishable as representing income. The Crown then appealed to the House of Lords unsuccessfully.

Another case (Tennent Plays Ltd. v. Commissioners of Inland Revenue) was heard in the Court of Appeal on 5th March, 1948, but it has only an indirect interest for the author and playwright. The company was formed to produce stage plays in collaboration with C.E.M.A. It had no share capital; its income and property had to be applied to the provision of its objects and its members were not entitled to receive any profits. It was claimed that the company had the right to be regarded as a charity for tax purposes under provision of Section 30 (1) of the Finance Act, 1921, since, although it numbered among its objects the carrying on of business as theatre, cinema, etc., proprietors and managers those objects were subsidiary and ancillary, merely to enable the company to raise the necessary finance for its main object. The Special Commissioners rejected that contention and the High Court saw no reason to reverse that decision and so dismissed the appeal. Later the Court of Appeal dismissed the Company's appeal with costs, and refused leave to appeal to the House of Lords.

THE WRITER AND ARTIST AND NATIONAL INSURANCE

SOME IMPORTANT POINTS TO REMEMBER

By J. H. BURTON

1. All persons must contribute to the National Insurance Scheme unless their total income, taking cash and kind together, is under £104 a year, in which case they may apply for exemption from paying contributions. The necessary form can be obtained from the local Insurance Office. While in the exempt class, sickness and maternity benefits are reduced.
2. Writers may be employed persons (paying the highest rate of contributions and eligible for all benefits), or self-employed persons (who must acquire their stamps from a Post Office and place them on their cards), or non-employed persons who pay lower contributions and are only entitled to lesser benefits.

3. An author who is insurable may have some difficulty in determining in which class he comes. He knows of course whether he is in salaried (or other form of remunerated) employment, or if he is a free-lance, without any control as to how and when he does his writing. But that is not the extent of the test to be applied. If he is free-lance, he is self-employed, or outside the Statutes as an excepted person.
4. A writer's classification can change from week to week; for instance if an otherwise self-employed person performs four or more hours' work for an employer in any week, for that week he ranks as an employed person. His employer must stamp the card at the higher rate; the writer is not liable to do it himself.
5. Employed persons pay their quota by deduction from their remuneration, self-employed writers buy their stamps from a Post Office and put them on their cards weekly, cancelling them in ink by writing the date on them. The card must be sent to the local branch of the National Insurance Office within six days after the end of the last week for which provision is made on the card. A new card will be received in exchange.

THE PERFORMING RIGHT SOCIETY, LTD.

THE Performing Right Society is an Association of Composers, Authors and Publishers of copyright musical works, established to collect fees for the public performance of such works in Great Britain and the British Empire overseas, and to restrain unauthorised performances thereof.

The Society's operations do not extend to the performance of plays, sketches or other works of a non-musical character, nor to operas, musical plays or other dramatico-musical works when performed in their entirety by living persons on the stage.

Licences are granted which convey the necessary permission for the public performance of any of the works of its members and those of the affiliated national societies of Canada, Australasia, and of twenty-two foreign countries. The combined membership thus represented by the Society is more than 60,000. Some 50,000 places of entertainment are covered by the Society's licence in the British Isles alone.

The constitution of the Society is that of a Company limited by guarantee, having no share capital. The Board of Directors is unpaid and consists of twelve composers and authors and twelve music publishers elected by the members from among their own number. The Society is not a profit-making organisation, the whole of the fees it collects being distributed amongst its members and the affiliated societies after deduction of administration expenses (which at present are about 9 per cent. of the gross sum collected) and contributions to the P.R.S. Benevolent Fund, established for the benefit of necessitous members and their dependents. The Society's official journal is issued to members gratis.

There are two distributions of General performing fees each year, and two distributions of Broadcasting fees. The Annual General Meeting is usually held in June. Every full member has one vote at General Meetings.

Applicants for membership are not required to pay an entrance fee, nor is any membership subscription or agency commission payable. Composers of musical works, and authors of lyrics or poems which have been set to music, are eligible to apply for membership, provided that their works are such as could be controlled by the Society and that they are performed in public to an appreciable extent.

Authors and Composers desiring further information should communicate with the Secretary at the Society's offices, Copyright House, 33 Margaret Street, London, W.1. T. Langham 3864. T.A. Perforight, Wesdo, London.

COMPOSERS AND WRITERS OF LYRICS

AMATEUR composers are warned that, unless they are in a position to engage in a speculative business, it is as foolish for them to put money into so-called "publication" of music as it is for the amateur author to frank his book.

Mr. Rutland Boughton has offered the following warning to amateurs, who, he says, "like the more hardened professional composers, find pleasure in seeing their musical thoughts in print. Because of that human weakness they become the prey of tenth-rate publishers, who offer to issue their music for them (however poor and ineffective it may be) if they will pay for the privilege. This is to advise musical comrades that if a piece of music is worth publishing decent publishers are willing to pay for it in cash or royalty—indeed, they sometimes refuse to publish at the composer's expense even when he prefers that method, as if a piece is worth while the publisher likes to control it. We may be sure that if a publisher is willing to issue music at the composer's expense, that music is either outside the traffic of the immediate market or no good at all."

Writers of lyrics which they wish to have set to music and published have noticed in various magazines a number of advertisements of composers and music publishers inviting MSS.

It cannot be too widely known that music publishers requiring work for issue on cash or royalty terms no more advertise in the public press for music and lyrics than a first-class publisher of books advertises for MSS. on that basis.

In connection with the eruption of an "outsider" class of music publishers, Truth has made several exposures.

A CODE FOR THE COMMERCIAL ARTIST

Issued by the Society of Industrial Artists (Empire House (R243), St. Martin's-le-Grand, E.C.1) in agreement with the Central Institute of Art and Design.

1. No member* shall accept any professional work in connection with which another member has been acting, except with agreement of the other member, or until he is satisfied that the former appointment has been terminated and any outstanding fees paid or provided for. No member shall attempt, directly or indirectly, to supplant another member by means of a reduction of fees or by any other improper inducement.
2. Any information acquired by a member during the course of his work regarding the policy or processes of a client is confidential, and shall not be divulged to any other person, firm or company, until such policy or processes become public knowledge, or, in the case of an employed designer, until the termination of his employment or contract. Processes of a highly confidential nature are normally the subject of special agreement between designer and manufacturer.
3. No member shall accept any trade commission, discount or allowance† in connection with any professional work on which he is engaged. No member shall allow a discount or introductory payment on his professional fees.
4. (a) No member shall accept a fee or commission as payment for the introduction of work to another member.
(b) Where members are asked to advise on the selection of designers for specific work and if a consultancy fee is to be charged for the advice, this fee shall be chargeable direct to the client and not to the designer recommended.
5. No work shall be undertaken on the invitation of a prospective buyer without a fee appropriate thereto. A member, however, is not debarred from submitting to a prospective buyer work which he has prepared on his own initiative. A member may, at his discretion, undertake work without fee or at a reduced fee for registered charitable or non-profit making organisations.
6. No member shall accept instructions involving plagiarism, or resulting in work which he believes would be reasonably regarded as such.
7. Members may be directors of, or hold shares in, any company, including those concerned in the production or sale of material produced to the members' designs.

Members may be directors of, or hold shares in, or undertake work for any company whose major activity is the production or sale of original designs provided such company abides by and recognises and acts in accordance with this Code of Professional Conduct.

8. Both paid and editorial advertising by or on behalf of members is permissible provided that advertisements do not contain statements that are false, or unfair to other members or competitive with other members, or their work, or in any other way incompatible with professional conduct.

The council will require an explanation and will take disciplinary action in the event of any infringement of this clause.

Fellow, Ordinary Member or Licentiate of the Society.

† Where a designer arranges for blockmaking on behalf of his client the 10% blockmakers' discount may be accepted by the designer as his service fee and no additional service fee should be charged by the designer to his client.

9. No member shall take part in any competition which is declared by the S.I.A. to be not in accordance with its published regulations for design competitions. Members are advised not to participate in competitions unless they are specifically advertised as approved by the Society.

The observance of this Code is a condition of membership of the Society (details of which will be found on p. 238) and its infringement renders a member liable to reprimand, suspension or expulsion.

Any questions which may arise as to the interpretation of the Code should be referred to the Council whose decision is final.

CONDITIONS OF CONTRACT FOR COMMERCIAL DESIGN

Issued by the Society of Industrial Artists, and recommended by them as being a suitable basis on which to undertake commissions for commercial designs.

1. All rough sketches or work of a preliminary nature shall remain the property of the designer and the copyright shall be vested in him if the roughs are not used; if a work is cancelled at any time the copyright of such work as may have been done by the designer shall belong to the designer.
2. Work in rough form shall not be used or published as finished work without the designer's consent. As a condition of such consent the total fee shall be paid.
3. Rough sketches or work of a preliminary nature shall be completed by the designer if such work is taken to a finished state. (In special circumstances the designer may agree to the preparation of finished drawings by a specialist.)
4. Unless the agreed fee specifically includes unlimited copyright, the work shall not be used for any more extensive purpose than that for which it is commissioned without the designer's consent and without an additional agreed fee.
5. The completed work shall not be altered or redrawn either wholly or in part by a person other than the original designer.
6. Additions or alterations made by the designer at the request of his client shall be the subject of an increased fee appropriate to the work involved unless such additions or alterations arise through the failure of the designer to follow instructions.
7. The following fees shall be paid in respect of work cancelled after it has already been started:
 - (a) Two-thirds of the fees in respect of roughs;
 - (b) Three-quarters of the total fee in respect of finish work.
8. An additional fee amounting to one-quarter of the total made in respect of the work being rushed by reason of a client's advance of the delivery date.
9. A published work shall bear the signature of the designer inconspicuously displayed in agreement with the client.
10. All fees shall be paid within one month of the submission of the account. Fees payable under para. 7 shall be payable forthwith on cancellation of work.
11. The designer shall be entitled to be provided with three reproductions of his work free of charge.
12. In the event of disagreement between the client and designer as to the interpretation of contract, or any matter arising thereunder, the case shall be taken before an arbitrator to be appointed jointly by agreement between them: or, if they fail to agree, an arbitrator to be appointed jointly by the President of the Society of Industrial Artists and the President of the appropriate Chamber of Commerce.

The conditions of Contract for Commercial Design are issued as a guide to a form of contract to be used by members when negotiating with their clients. The Society recommends that special care should be taken to:—

1. Confirm all arrangements in writing and state precisely:
 - (a) Fee for completed design and whether client is entitled to full or limited copyright.
 - (b) Fee for rough if design is not accepted.
2. Enclose a copy of the conditions, which is obtainable in leaflet form, with a note to the effect that these are the conditions under which the designer normally works, and in special circumstances to draw attention to particularly relevant clauses.
3. State on the invoice what the work is for and what copyright is included in the fee.

SCHEDULE OF AVERAGE FEES FOR COMMERCIAL DESIGN

THESE schedules are issued by the Society of Industrial Artists as a guide to members who have had little experience of current fees.

The fees are listed in the schedule under headings covering most categories of work normally commissioned. In every case they represent fair AVERAGE fees and should not be regarded as standard charges nor as maximum or minimum charges for specific works.

The Society is always glad to advise members on fees in circumstances not dealt with in these schedules.

Definition of Categories

Local (L).—Designs or illustrations restricted in use to small towns, boroughs, or boroughs of large cities.

National (N).—Designs or illustrations for use on a general scale in large towns and cities.

International (I).—Designs or illustrations for companies or users of international standing in cases where such work is widely used, or work for international use by any company.

Note.—In cases where members undertake commissions in limited competition (i.e. between two or more designers), fees should be at a higher rate than would normally be paid for such work, to compensate for the risk involved.

1. Press advertisement design (roughs)

Roughs sufficiently finished to give a client a clear idea of printed appearance. NOT including any working drawings.

Colour	20–25 gns.	25–60 gns.	75 gns.

Notes.—Finished (working) drawings may involve anything from the simplest piece of lettering to a highly complicated drawing, calling for the work of a specialist. The designer of the advertisement may or may not be able to undertake the finished work himself. Circumstances will dictate whether or not the designer will confine his work to the design and commission a specialist to undertake the finished work for him. In the latter case the designer will work in collaboration with the specialist but still retain control over the whole job. The designer's fees, and those of the specialist, will be a matter for consultation between the interested parties.

3. Press advertisement drawings

Roughs only		2–5 gns.
Colour		20 gns.	30 gns.

Note.—The above fees refer to drawings to specification where client has provided idea and layout and where the drawings form a major part of the advertisement.

4. Posters

A lesser fee may be charged for certain types of typographical posters.

5. Packaging (surface design)

Construction and material research, and design of container should be subject to a separate fee.

Notes.—The above fees include working drawings. Adaptations of the original design, for reproduction by different processes or for purposes other than the original, should be subject to an additional fee.

In assessing fees for trade marks it should be remembered that a considerable number of conferences and much research will be involved.

Notes.—Fees for books do not include jacket or any special drawings, maps or diagrams or any mechanical art work.

If any experimental typesetting is done in the case of books, book jackets or magazine design this should be charged additional to the design fees.

8. Book design

The following fees have been worked out in a way that gives both designer and client the most satisfactory method of charging for a type of work that is difficult to estimate in advance.

(a) General typography for a book consisting of typographical specifications for prelims., first page of text, and double spread of text, chapter heads, etc., glossaries, bibliographies, index, etc., and case layout at an average rate of 1 gn. per page, minimum 10 gns.

(b) Layout of illustrations and scaling of photographs, marking for block making, specifications for captions, etc.

When illustrations are used together in one folio, at an average rate of 5s. per page.

(c) Layout of book with illustrations running in and with the text at an average rate of from 7s. 6d. to 1 gn. per page, according to the size and nature of the book.

(d) Illustrated books using exhibition technique in one colour, 2 gns. per page.

Two or more colours almost impossible to lay down a figure as this is likely to vary so considerably and should be discussed and settled on any individual project.

(e) Jackets: typographical, including layout and typography with photographs 7 gns.; layout and typography with photographs or drawings supplied 9 gns.; including drawings or photo-montage 12 gns.

9. Printed matter

Designs excluding finished art work.

Showcards:				Note. —If letterheads or stationery ranges include designing trade mark, this should be subject to separate fees (see Schedule 6).
(a) Roughs	2 gns.	10 gns.	10 gns.
(b) Finished	5 gns.	20 gns.	35 gns.
Catalogues (trade)	10 to 100 gns. according to size

Notes.—Fees for booklets, showcards and catalogues do not include finished art work which may be a considerable item in terms of work. Whether or not a printer's type specification should be included in the above fees is a matter for the designer to decide.

If for experimental purposes the designer is involved in any typesetting charges these should be charged additional to the design fee.

11. Book illustrations

A separate schedule of average fees covering the various forms of book illustration is being prepared by the Commercial Design Practice Committee and will be issued during 1949.

12. Exhibition and display

A separate schedule of average fees covering Exhibition and Display Design is also available.

SCHEDULE OF AVERAGE FEES FOR TEXTILE DESIGN

When assessing the value of a design, the fee to be charged depends on the quality of the design and the amount of work involved.

These fees are for completed designs ready for the engraver or draftsman.

Charges for roughs.—Roughs are to be considered as preliminary sketches.

If a manufacturer buys the design at this stage for completing by his own staff, 75 per cent of the full fee should be charged.

Commissioned work.—No commission to be undertaken without an agreed fee. If the design is rejected, the client can either pay the agreed fee and retain the design or return the design to the artist on payment of 75 per cent of the fee. The artist to retain all rights in the design.

PREPARATION AND SUBMISSION OF MANUSCRIPTS

Neatness of a manuscript is of the utmost importance: the first impression made on an editor or publisher's reader is vital. MSS. should be typed and not hand-written. Do not let the typewriter become dirty: a little petrol and an old tooth-brush cleans keys quickly and effectively.

Paper should be neither flimsy nor too thick, and quarto in size (about 8½ by 10½ inches).

Black typewriter ribbon is preferable, except for plays when red and black should be used:—

Red for names of characters, stage directions, etc. Black for dialogue. If a black-red ribbon is not available, characters' names should be in capitals and stage directions underlined in red.

Double-spacing is always preferable. Each page should have the same number of lines and width of line.

Good margins are essential, particularly on the left-hand side. If left-hand margins are not adequate, it is impossible to read the MS. when it is in a file or holder.

Corrections should be kept to a minimum on the final typed copy.

Pages should be numbered throughout.

Fastening should be firm. Pages should be clipped together: in a long MS. each section or chapter should be secured separately.

Tired-looking MS. should not be sent. This can be cured by retyping the first and last sheets.

Protection of MSS.—This can be achieved by a stiffer and slightly larger sheet at back and front.

On the first page give the title of the MS., and at the top or bottom the name and address of the author, and the approximate number of words. Repeat name and address elsewhere, e.g. at end, in case the front page becomes detached.

Submission of MSS.—(1) Stamps to cover return of MSS. should always be sent. Many authors always send MSS. by registered post. It is not necessary to do so for short MSS., but it is worth while for MSS. of book length.

(2) Keep a copy of MS. in case of loss.

(3) Maintain a record of all MSS. sent out. (A suggested layout for a register is given below.)

Date	Name of MS.	Where sent	Accepted or rejected	Date	Payment made

Estimating.—To estimate the length of a MS., calculate the average number of words on a page—take the average of say eight pages; multiply the average by the total number of pages in the MS., making allowance for half-pages, etc., at the ends of chapters.

Indexing.—There is no quick method. It is advisable to leave the preparation of an index until the book is in page proof. The words to be indexed can be underlined and then typed out with the page references against them. The typed pages of entries can then be cut up and arranged in alphabetical order; and the whole re-typed. An alternative method is to write each word and page reference on a separate slip of paper, and from these slips to type out a final copy.

Approach to Publisher, Agent or Editor.—(1) Editor. A preliminary letter is not necessary before submitting a short article to an editor.

(2) Publisher. In submitting a long MS. to a publisher it is worth while telling him in advance what the book is about and finding out if he is interested. DO NOT SEEK A PERSONAL INTERVIEW. A good MS. will make its own way.

(3) Agent. Preliminaries should be arranged with literary agents before forwarding MS.

After despatch of MSS.—There may be a considerable interval before a MS. is returned by the publisher whether accepted finally or not, but most publishers acknowledge receipt of MSS. There is no need to remind him within a reasonable period (say 2 or 3 months), as he may wish to get more than one person's opinion before coming to a decision. In the case of a topical book it would be necessary to ask for a decision considerably earlier. Even in the best firms it has been known for MSS. to be lost or mislaid; for this reason it is advisable to keep a copy.

Illustrations.—If the main feature of a proposed book lies in its illustrations (as is often the case with travel books and books for children), they should be submitted with the MS. It should be remembered that good illustrations cannot make up for a bad text, nor will a good text make up for bad illustrations.

Quotations from Copyright Material.—Authors using quotations from copyright material must ensure that they or their publishers obtain permission for the right of reproduction. It is often costly, and authors should consider this before embarking on a work inviting extensive quotation from modern authors.

Correction.—It cannot be too strongly emphasised that correction, once a book is in type, should be kept to a minimum: if corrections have to be made, the new matter should exactly fit into the space made by removing something on the same page to make room for it. This cannot always be done, but is of special importance when the book is in page proof: the cost of rearranging subsequent pages to incorporate the new matter is considerable. Most publishers include a clause in their contracts to the effect that the cost of corrections exceeding 20 per cent of the cost of composition must be borne by the author. This may appear to be a generous allowance, but in point of fact allows for little to be done, since the cost of correcting type is out of all proportion to the original cost of setting it up.

It is a common weakness on the part of writers to make corrections in their manuscript up to a certain point and then to leave final polishing up to be made on the proofs when the book is set up in type.

Even experienced authors are guilty of this to a large extent, and as it greatly increases the cost of the production of a magazine or book, most publishers insert a clause in their agreements stipulating that the cost of all corrections beyond a certain percentage shall be borne by the author.

This unfortunately leads to constant friction, for an author does not realise that when he, perhaps, deletes or adds two or three words at the beginning of a paragraph, this necessitates the overrunning of every line to the end of that paragraph, and what looks to the author to be the work of a moment to correct probably takes a compositor half an hour to put right.

After such emendation in galley form the publisher should surely be entitled to expect that the book is then ready to be printed off when it is made up into page, apart from the rectification of any printer's errors that may occur (such as letters dropped or transposed) in the make-up into page; it is not, however, uncommon for an author, when he gets the page proofs, to continue amending sentences or paragraphs almost as heavily as in the galley proofs.

The result of all this is unsatisfactory to both the author and publisher, for when the invoice is rendered for the cost of the excess corrections the author becomes indignant and thinks that the amount charged is an imposition on the part of the publisher. He writes protesting, and the publisher takes up the matter with the printer again, upon which the printer gets out all the corrected proofs, spends much time in getting out his working docket and proves that instead of the charge being excessive it is really much more moderate than was justified by the time and trouble spent. So it must be seen how unsatisfactory the whole matter is, and from the point of view of both the publisher and the printer there should have been no necessity for any such friction if the author had attended to editing his typescript before submitting it for the printer.

ON CORRECTING PROOFS

In all cases, but particularly in those where the author is unable to see the proof sheets, accuracy and distinctness of copy are particularly desirable. If attention be paid to the right spelling of the names of persons and places, technical terms, etc., the finishing of sentences marked by the period,—that the author's ideas may not be misunderstood,—and the hand-writing tolerably legible, much time and a considerable expense will be saved, and the great object of accuracy attained.

ADDRESS AT GETTYSBURG

[Fourscore and seven years ago our fathers brought [ forth on this continent a new ~~nation~~ ~~conceived~~ in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal. Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation or any nation so conceived and so dedicated can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting-place for those who here here gave their lives that that Nation might live. it is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. But, in a larger sense we cannot dedicate — we cannot consecrate — we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note nor long remember what we here say, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us, the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought

EXAMPLES OF SIZES OF TYPE

TYPE faces are measured to-day by the Point system, rather than by the older method of naming the sizes. The Point is the unit of type measurements; 72 Points equal one inch.

For varieties of a type face see the "Table of Signs Used in Correcting Proofs" on page 328.

TYPE FACES

A FEW examples of the many different type faces available are given below. The choice of a type face is dependent not only upon aesthetic consideration but such practical matters as the kind of book or journal it is, the public it is intended to appeal to, its length, size of page, type area, size of type and leading.

EXAMPLES OF "LEADING"

NOTE the varying degrees of readability, due not to the size of type, which is the same throughout, but to the use of leads between the lines.

Set solid, i.e. without leading.

There are no short cuts. Behind the most spectacular literary successes lie, if the envious student only knew it, long records of hard work, of cheerful adaptability, and of dogged patience. Which is as it should be, and applies not merely to literature, but to the sister arts of the actor, the painter and the musician.

Set with one-point leads between the lines.

SIZES OF BOOKS

THE size most favoured, not only for novels, but for every type of book, is Crown 8vo, ranging from Large Crown 8vo ($8 \times 5\frac{1}{4}$ inches) to Small Crown 8vo ($7 \times 4\frac{1}{4}$ inches). The small sizes given in the table below, such as Foolscap 16mo ($4\frac{1}{4} \times 3\frac{3}{8}$ inches), are not much used except for religious and devotional books, and the large sizes such as Imperial 4to ($15\frac{1}{2} \times 11\frac{1}{2}$ inches) are used only for de-luxe editions or books on art. Pocket editions are usually Foolscap 8vo or Small Crown 8vo, and biographies, memoirs, and other non-fiction works Demy 8vo or Royal 8vo.

The table on page 331 gives the sizes before cutting and trimming.

IMPERIAL AND FOREIGN POSTAGE RATES

When sending MSS. abroad it is important to remember that in some countries the value of a sixpenny International Reply Coupon is less than the amount stated on the coupon. In the United States, for instance, a sixpenny coupon is only worth 2½d.; a 4 oz. MSS., therefore, sent from this country to the U.S.A. will cost 5½d. in stamps, but one shilling and sixpence worth of International Reply Coupons must be sent if the author wishes the MSS. returned.

Imperial Coupons (price 3d. each) are valid only within the British Empire. They are exchangeable for a stamp or stamps representing the minimum postage payable on a letter sent from any country within the Empire to this country. Imperial Coupons are not exchangeable in Egypt and the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

The postage rate (letters) to U.S.A., Australia, India and Pakistan, Canada, New Zealand, and South Africa, is 2½d. for the first oz. and 1d. for each additional oz. The rates for parcel post vary, and it is advisable to have a Post Office Guide for reference.

CAREERS FOR WRITERS AND ARTISTS

A series of pamphlets, "Careers for Men and Women," published by H.M. Stationery Office for the Ministry of Labour include pamphlets on Publishing and Journalism (No. 26) and Art (including Commercial Art and Design) (No. 5). The pamphlets, which cost only a few pence, give an excellent idea of the qualifications and training necessary for entrants into publishing, journalism and art. The Careers Sections of the *Public Schools Year Book and The Girls' School Year Book,* also provide an admirable survey of these professions.

SOURCES OF INFORMATION

- A. Bibliographical.
- B. Select List of Special Libraries.
- C. Government and Public Offices.

It is not always easy for the writer to discover the books containing the information he requires. A most valuable aid is the National Book League Series of Book Lists, an index of which is given on page 333. Each list gives a selected bibliography of its subject. Members of the National Book League (for further information see page 234) can make use of the Information Bureau: a most valuable service to the writer. The N.B.L. Series of Reader's Guides will also be found useful.

In addition to the standard reference books which every writer should possess or have ready access to: such books as Who's Who, Whitaker's Almanack, Fowler's Modern English Usage, a good Dictionary and a Gazetteer, etc., a writer will still find that for much of his information he must turn to outside sources; to the Public and Specialist Libraries, Government departments, or professional and industrial organisations.

Aslib (The Association of Special Libraries and Information Bureau, 52 Bloomsbury Street, W.C.1.), acts as a clearing house for specialised information and particulars of membership can be obtained from the Aslib Office. The Aslib Directory, an exhaustive guide to sources of information in Great Britain and Ireland, and its more recent supplements The Aslib Guides, can be seen in most public libraries, while its guide to societies, works of reference and libraries, British Sources of Reference and Information (1947, 6s.) is now on sale to the public.

Other useful works on how to use public and institutional libraries are Libraries, Museums and Art Galleries Year Book (Clarke, 18s.), How to Find Out and How to use Books by Lionel R. McColvin (National Book League, Cambridge University Press), and Facts and How to Find Them by William A. Bagley (Pitman, 7s. 6d.).

A list of special libraries will be found on page 334.

On the next page there is an abridged index of all N.B.L. Book Lists available, at the time of going to press, together with compilers and separate prices. Members may have back numbers, ordered by subject, at half-price. Complete sets of lists can no longer be supplied owing to shortage of stock as a result of enemy action. A new series of N.B.L. Book Lists is in preparation. The first list, English Literature: History and Criticism will be published in March, 1949. Other titles will be Agriculture, Reference Books, Philosophy, Psychology, Careers, Art and Craft Appreciation, Industrial Management.

CLASSIFIED INDEX

*American Journals **

Overseas Dominions and Indian Journals †

This Index is necessarily only a broad classification. It should be regarded rather as a pointer to possible markets, and should be used with discrimination. Most overseas newspapers are not included in this Index since they offer little scope to the free-lance writer or artist.

ANNUALS

It is not possible to include details of all the Annuals issued. Many of them are published by the firms listed below and in all cases MSS. submitted will be considered for all a firm's annuals or similar publications.

AMALGAMATED PRESS, LTD.,

Fleetway House, Farringdon Street, London, E.C.4.

Most of the Annuals contain stories and features from their children's publications, and writers who supply material for these also write for the Annuals. For this reason the market is very limited.

DEAN & SON, LTD.,

61 High Path, Merton, London, S.W.19.

Stories of 2500–5000 words for boys and girls of 12–15 years, stories of 1000–2500 words for children of 7–10 years; stories for infants 500–800 words. Most suitable time for submission June to October.

JUVENILE PRODUCTIONS, LTD.

(Incorporating The Thames Publishing Co.)

Ludgate House, 110–111, Fleet Street, London, E.C.4.

Ideas, features, picture-strips, puzzles, how-to-makes; fairy and other stories for tinies, up to 2,200 words; stories for 7–10 years, up to 2,500 words; stories for 11–14 years, up to 5,000 words. Older girls' stories specially required. Freshness of idea and treatment essential. Payment for all rights on acceptance at Editor's valuation, unless authors quote price. Submissions all the year round.

Can You Write SHORT STORIES?

Short story writing is the ideal hobby.

If you have literary aptitude you can be trained to work up ideas into plots and make saleable stories out of them.

Learn the essential technique the Regent way. In a fascinating course, conducted by post, the literary aspirant is shown how to get plots (the Regent Plot Finder taps dozens of sources of material), how to construct them, how to write dialogue, how to prepare MSS., and HOW TO SELL THEM for the best prices. Several of the most famous fiction writers of the day have contributed to this unique course.

It is training that enables one to appreciate the fictional possibilities of such commonplace incidents as omitting to close a door, forgetting an acquaintance's name, mislaying a letter, losing an attaché case, going home from work by a different route—an absorbing plot could be built up on any one of those trivial occurrences.

The instructors are short story writers who combine successful experience (they have sold hundreds of stories to the Press) with the ability to teach.

★ Send to-day for HOW TO SUCCEED AS A WRITER

Take the first step to-day. Send to The Regent Institute (Dept. 35S), Regent House, Palace Gate, London, W.8, for a free copy of the prospectus "How to Succeed as a Writer."

This informative booklet tells you all you want to know about the Institute's courses—the tuition is available at most reasonable fees—and describes the varied openings for the free lance.

There are many people who, as a result of applying for this booklet, have been enabled to earn considerable sums in leisure hours.

Write for your copy of "How to Succeed as a Writer" NOW. There is no obligation.

LIBRARY REVIEW

A Bookish-Library Magazine

This magazine remains unique in bridging the gap between bookish and technical interests in librarianship. Its panel of contributors is unequalled in character and range, and is drawn from Great Britain, America, and other important countries of the world.

THE PORTLAND LITERARY AGENCY

(Established 1911)

Rejects, for obvious reasons, far more MSS. than it accepts. Sells a remarkable percentage of those approved. Obtains highest prices. Pays cash for all MSS., except novels and serials, immediately on the editor's notification of acceptance, thus obviating, in most cases, weeks of waiting. Charges no reading fees.

We undertake the placing of Novels, Serials, Short Stories, Articles, Poems, Stage and Photo Plays. Our extensive provincial connection absorbs quantities of material weekly which would have but small chance with the London Press. Post MSS. (plus stamps) to The Secretary, P.L.A., "Ravenhurst," Guestling, Hastings.
